UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

No. CV 76-1803-F

SANTOS RIVERA, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

CITY OF RIVERSIDE, et al.

Defendants.

Filed: January 10, 1978
Clerk, U.S. District Court
Central District of California

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Twenty-three of the thirty-two defendants named in this case have moved for summary judgment pursuant to Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The defendants filed affidavits in support of their motions and the plaintiffs submitted counter affidavits in response. The defendants' motions were first heard on September 26, 1977. Additional affidavits were subsequently filed by both plaintiffs and defendants and the matter was taken under submission by the court. For the reasons stated below the motions will be granted as to 17 of the moving defendants, and denied as to 6 others.

It is a well-established rule that on a motion for summary judgment the moving party bears the burden of demonstrating the absence of any genuine issue of fact and of establishing that he is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. Jones v. Halekulani Hotel, Inc., 557 F.2d 1308 (9th Cir. 1977). Therefore, in considering the instant motions, the court must view the allegations of the complaint and the facts supporting them in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs. Nevertheless, in order to overcome a defendant's summary judgment motion, it must appear that the facts, when so construed, support a viable legal theory which would entitle the plaintiffs to a judgment against that defendant for the acts complained of. Mutual Fund Investors v. Putnam Management Co., 553 F.2d 620, 624 (9th Cir. 1977). Bearing these principles in mind, and having carefully considered the affidavits and arguments presented by both sides, the court has made the following determinations:

1. As to the defendants Callow and R. Boyer the plaintiffs do not oppose the motions for summary judgment. These officers were not present at the scene of the incident which forms the major basis for the plaintiffs' complaint.

2. As to the defendants Albee, Arellano, M. Boyer, Carroll, Conner, Dana, Felcher, Gann, Grutzmacher, Haywood, Henery, Nissen, Qualls, Shively and Tennell, the court finds that there are no genuine issues of fact remaining to be litigated in this case. These defendants were present at the scene of the incident, and several of them entered the Rivera residence in response to orders from their commanding officer. However, their affidavits establish that they did not have any physical or verbal contact with any of the plaintiffs, did not participate in the arrest or search of any of the plaintiffs, and did not personally engage in any conduct which violated the plaintiffs' civil rights. The responsive affidavits filed by the plaintiffs are not sufficient to overcome this showing because none of the actions of these individual defendants which are referred to in the affidavits rise to the level of constituional violations.

Furthermore, in their affidavits these defendants all deny having participated in any manner in a conspiracy or in any concerted action to violate the civil rights of the plaintiffs. Even accepting the broadest view of the scope of the schemes and conspiracy allegations of plaintiffs' complaint, these defendants have sworn that they were not a part of any such activity. No triable issue on this point is raised by the mere fact that these defendants were present at the time of the incident in question, or that they made arrests or conducted searches of persons other than the plaintiffs. Also, no reasonable inference of an unlawful conspiracy can be drawn from the fact that some of these defendants conferred with each other before writing reports about the incident or that their reports were similar in content.

Likewise, plaintiffs' argument that there are genuine issues as to possible negligent violations of their civil rights by these defendants must fail. Cf. Navarette v. Enomoto, 536 F.2d 277 (9th Cir. 1976), cert. granted, 429 U.S. 1060 (1977). The defendants all deny having seen any violations of civil rights by other officers, and they deny withholding information or exculpatory evidence. Again, no triable issue is raised by their mere presence at the scene. Cf. Byrd v. Brishke, 466 F.2d 6 (7th Cir. 1972), relied on by plaintiffs to support their argument on this point. In Byrd the Court of Appeals reversed a directed verdict in favor of three police officers who, it was established, were present in the back room of a bar with a dozen other officers who surrounded the plaintiff as he was severely beaten. In such a case, a reasonable question as to negligence is clearly raised by mere presence, since awareness of the civil rights violation taking place is obvious. There is no indication whatsoever that such an extreme situation is involved in this case.

3. Regarding the other six moving defendants it appears to the court that there are material factual issues which cannot be resolved on the motions for summary judgment.

a. As to the defendants Smith and Taulli the plaintiffs point to answers to interrogatories indicating that these two officers assisted in the follow-up investigation which led to the filing of criminal complaints against some of the plaintiffs. Part of the alleged civil rights violations covered by plaintiffs' complaint concern these charges. Since the affidavits filed by these defendants do not address their participation in the investigation and any role they may have played in recommending prosecution of the plaintiffs, they are insufficient to support a summary judgment at this time.

b. Affidavits submitted by the plaintiffs regarding the defendants Eltringham and Olsen raise a genuine issue as to possible civil rights violations by those defendants as a result of their surveillance of the Rivera residence from a police helicopter on the night in question. The defendants deny direct physical contact with any of the plaintiffs, but their affidavits do not address the plaintiffs' allegations of harassment and invasion of privacy. It also appears that there is a material factual dispute regarding the claims of these defendants that they issued a dispersal order from their helicopter before any officers entered the c. As to the defendant Richardson there remains an issue of possible liability based on his allegedly having ordered a "stake-out" of the Rivera residence and his request for additional officers to report to the scene. The affidavits submitted by this defendant do not refer to these orders.

d. There are conflicting affidavits on the question of whether the defendant Brading personally participated in the arrest and booking of the plaintiff Jerome Rivera. Such a conflict must be resolved against the defendant on this motion for summary judgment and his motion will therefore be denied.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the motions for summary judgment filed on August 5, 1977 are granted as to the following defendants:

Richard Albee	Ernest Felcher
Peter Arellano	Daniel Gann
Mark Boyer	Fred Grutzmacher
Richard Boyer	Robert Haywood
George Callow	Ivan Henery
Gerald Carroll	Gary Nissen
Thomas Conner	Kenneth Qualls

	James Tennell

As to the following defendants, the motions for summary judgment filed on August 5, 1977 are denied:

James Brading	Linford Richardson
Donald Eltringham	Michael Smith
Jon Olsen	Don Taulli

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the clerk forthwith serve copies of this memorandum opinion and order by United States mail upon counsel for the parties appearing in this action.

NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION BY PLAINTIFFS FOR REASONABLE ATTORNEYS FEES AND COSTS

TO: THE DEFENDANTS AND THEIR COUNSEL OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on Monday, December 15, 1980, or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard in the Courtroom of the Honorable Marianna R. Pfaelzer, District Judge, plaintiffs will move this Court for Attorneys Fees and Costs pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1988.

Said motion will be based on the attached Memorandum of Law and the accompanying Affidavits.

DATED: 12/1/80

Respectfully submitted,

/ss/ Roy B. Cazares
ROY B. CAZARES

INTRODUCTION

This memorandum or points and authorities will inform the court of the issues and authority relevant to an award of attorneys' fees in the present case. Roy Cazares and Gerald Lopez, plaintiffs' attorneys, have dedicated themselves to this civil rights action for the last five years.

Having at last prevailed on the merits, plaintiffs now desire that the court award attorneys' fees pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1988—the Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976. This memorandum will demonstrate the compelling need for awards of attorneys' fees in civil rights litigation, and the propriety of the requested award in this case.

I.

PLAINTIFFS' ENTITLEMENT TO AN AWARD OF FEES UNDER 42 U.S.C. 1988

42 U.S.C. 1988 provides, in pertinent part:

> In any action or proceeding to enforce a provision of sections 1981, 1982, 1983, 1985 and 1986 of this title . . ., the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fees as part of the costs.

Section 1988 vests the court with the disretion to award attorneys' fees in this case. Although the statute fails to specify when an award of fees is appropriate, the legislative history firmly commands that "a party seeking to enforce the rights protected by the statutes covered by S. 2278 [1988] 'should ordinarily recover attorneys' fees unless special circumstances would render such an award unjust' Newman v. Piggie Park Enterprises, Inc., 390 U.S. 400, 402 (1968) quoted in S. Rep. No. 94-1011, 94th Cong. 2nd Sess. 4 (1976). A brief overview of the circumstances which led to the enactment of section 1988 will help to explain the adoption of the stringent standard of Newman v. Piggie Park.

Section 1988 was enacted in response to the Supreme Court's decision in Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. v. Wilderness Society, 421 U.S. 240 (1975). In Alyeska, the Court disapproved a line of lower court cases in which attorneys' fees had been granted on a private attorney general theory in civil rights actions based on the Reconstruction statutes, 42 U.S.C. 1981-1983 and 1985-1986. The lower courts had justified the awards on two grounds: first, that the civil rights actions furthered the public interest, and second, that since fees were specifically provided in the more modern civil rights statutes, it would be anomalous to deny them in cases brought pursuant to the Reconstruction amendments. See, Comment, Attorney's Fees in Damage Actions Under the Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976, 47 UNIV. OF CHI. L. REV. 332 (1980). Alyeska rejected this newly created exception to the so-called "American Rule" against awarding attorney's fees to prevailing parties because the exception constituted a judicial invasion of "the legislature's province." Alyeska, supra, at 271. Congress' response was extraordinarily swift and unequivocal. It enacted the Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976, 42 U.S.C. 1988, allowing the award of attorney's fees to prevailing parties in suits to enforce the Reconstruction statutes.

Viewed in this context, section 1988 clearly embodies Congress' commitment to the enforcement of civil rights. The legislative history demonstrates Congress' concern that, in many instances, important rights would not be vindicated if counsel could not be employed to undertake civil rights litigation. By permitting fee-shifting, Congress sought to ensure the continued litigation of civil rights actions — to guarantee that "civil rights laws are not to become mere hollow pronouncements which the average citizen cannot enforce . . ." S. Rep. No. 94-1011, 94th Cong., 2nd Sess. 6 (1976).

The Ninth Circuit has followed the congressionally-approved standard of Newman v. Piggie Park. In Sethy v. Alameda County Water District, 602 F.2d 894, 897 (9th Cir. 1979), the court recognized that "Congress plainly intended that successful plaintiffs 'should ordinarily recover an attorney's fee unless special circumstances would render such an award unjust.' S. Rep. No. 94-1011, 94th Cong. 2nd Sess. 4, reprinted in U.S. Code Cong & Admin News pp. 5908, 5912 quoting Newman v. Piggie Park Enterprises, 390 U.S. 400 (1968)." Courts in the Ninth Circuit have likewise acknowledged the importance of attorneys' fees as a means of encouraging civil rights actions. In Keith v. Volpe, No. CV-72-355-HP 6 (C.D. Cal., March 31, 1980), a 1983 action decided in the Central District of California, Judge Pregerson noted that "[c]ivil rights plaintiffs who, more often than not, bear the burdens that accompany poverty and minority status in our society, should be encouraged to use the federal courts to avail themselves of the promise of equality that abides in the Constitution."

Plaintiffs submit that an award of fees in this case is appropriate. Both the legislative history and the cases in this Circuit support the necessity of such an award as a means of fulfilling important policies reflected both in section 1988 and in the Reconstruction statutes generally.

II.

RETROACTIVITY

Although the present case commenced prior to the enactment of section 1988, plaintiffs' attorneys should be compensated for the entire period during which they rendered legal services. Section 1988 applies retroactively to all cases which were pending in 1976, the year of its adoption.

In Bradley v. School Board of City of Richmond, 416 U.S. 696 (1974), the Supreme Court held that an attorneys' fees statute should be retroactively applied to cases pending when the statute is passed. The Court based its holding on the principle that "a court is to apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision, unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is statutory discretion or legislative history to the contrary." Bradley, supra, at 711.

The legislative history of section 1988 leaves no doubt that section 1988 incorporates the rule in Bradley. The House Report, which specifically addresses the issue of retroactivity, states:

> In accordance with the applicable decisions of the Supreme Court, the bill is intended to apply to all cases pending on the date of the enactment as well as all future cases. Bradley v. Richmond School Board, 416 U.S. 696 (1974) in H.R. Rep. No. 94-1558, 94th Cong. 2nd Sess. 4, n.6 (1976).

The Ninth Circuit, moreover, in Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 550 F. 2d 464 (9th Cir. 1977), expressly approved the retroactivity of section 1988 in affirming an award of fees which had been made by the District Court prior to the enactment of section 1988 in Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 64 F.R.D. 680 (N.D. Cal. 1974). Thus, the rule of retroactivity approved both in the legislative history and by this Circuit supports plaintiffs' claim that all services rendered in this case should be compensated.

III

FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED BY THE COURT IN DETERMINING THE AMOUNT OF FEES TO BE AWARDED

The amount of fees to be awarded pursuant to section 1988 is another issue which was addressed by Congress in the legislative history of the Act. The Senate Report states:

> It is intended that the amount of fees awarded under S. 2278 [1988] be governed by the same standards which prevail in other types of equally complex Federal litigation, such as antitrust cases and not be reduced because the rights involved may be non-pecuniary in nature. . . . In computing the fee, counsel for prevailing parties should be paid, as is traditional with attorneys compensated by a fee-paying client, "for all time reasonably expended on a matter." S.Rep. No. 94-1011, 94th Cong., 2nd Sess. 6 (1976) (emphasis added).

Courts confronted with the task of determining the amount of fees to be awarded generally begin with the calculation of a base figure which reflects the amount of time reasonably expended. Then, in accordance with the legislative history, they adjust the award so that it comports with the standards of other "equally complex Federal litigation, such as antitrust cases." Plaintiffs will likewise address the issues in this sequence.

A. DETERMINATION OF A REASONABLE HOURLY RATE

An attorney's reasonable hourly rate serves as a basis for subsequent calculations leading to an award of fees. The legislative history of section 1988 suggests that the reasonable hourly rate should be based on a consideration of twelve factors. These factors were set forth in Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, 488 F.2d 714 (5th Cir. 1974), a title VII case which was expressly approved in the legislative history of section 1988. See S.Rep. No. 94-1011, supra, at 6. According to Johnson, these factors are: time and labor required; novelty and difficulty of the questions; skill requisite to perform the legal service properly; preclusion of other employment by the attorney due to acceptance of the case; customary fee; whether the fee is fixed or contingent; amount involved and results obtained; experience, reputation and ability of the attorneys; undesirability of the case; nature and length of the professional relationship with the client and awards in similar cases.

The Johnson factors serve as a basis for evaluation of a reasonable hourly rate in this case. As the remainder of this memorandum and the affidavits of Roy Cazares and Gerald Lopez demonstrate, the present case required enormous expenditures of time and demanded legal arguments on complex and untested theories. The contingent nature of the fees, and the favorable verdict obtained also militate in favor of a generous estimate of the reasonable hourly rate. Finally, the skill and reputation of plaintiffs' counsel must be recognized. With regard to this factor, the Johnson court stated:

> Most fee scales reflect an experience differential with the more experienced attorneys receiving larger compensation. An attorney specializing in civil rights may enjoy a higher rate for his expertise than others, providing his ability corresponds with his experience. Longevity per se, however, should not dictate the higher fee. If a young attorney demonstrates the skill and ability, he should not be penalized for only recently being admitted to the bar. Johnson, supra, at 718-19.

The professional conduct of Messrs. Cazares and Lopez in this case reflects a thorough knowledge of civil rights as well as complete command of litigation skills. These are the factors which must be focused upon in evaluating the experience, reputation and ability of plaintiffs' counsel. Plaintiffs therefore contend that, applying the Johnson factors to this case, this Court is justified in awarding $125.00 per hour as a reasonable hourly rate.

B. THE PROPRIETY OF A MULTIPLIER

The reasonable hourly rate multiplied by the number of hours expended provides a base figure, or lodestar. Once the lodestar has been fixed, it is appropriate for the Court to award successful plaintiffs a multiplier of the lodestar—that is, the court may double, triple or quadruple the lodestar. The legislative history of section 1988 supports the propriety of a multiplier, as is evidenced by its specific reference to fee awards in anti-trust cases. S.Rep. No. 94-1011 supra at 6. In the leading anti-trust attorneys' fees case of Lindy Brothers Builders of Philadelphia v. American Radiator and Sanitary Corp., 487 F.2d 161 (3d Cir. 1973), the court suggested that the multiplier be determined in light of both the contingent nature of success and the quality of the attorneys' work. The court emphasized that attorneys' fees cannot properly be determined merely by multiplying the hourly rate for each attorney times the number of hours devoted to the case.

The contingency and quality factors suggested by Lindy weigh heavily in favor of a multiplier in the present case. The Lindy court noted the special significance of the contingency factor "where the attorney has no private agreement that guarantees payment even if no recovery is obtained..." Lindy supra at 168. In this case plaintiffs' counsel had no fee agreement. Had the jury returned a verdict for defendants, these attorneys would have received no compensation for their five years of labor.

The quality factor likewise supports a multiplier. The Lindy court stated that "[i]n evaluating the quality of an attorney's work in a case, the district court should consider the complexity and novelty of the issues presented, the quality of the work that the judge has been able to observe, and the amount of recovery obtained." Lindy supra at 168. This court is well-aware of the complexity of legal issues presented and the high quality of representation in the present case. In considering the amount of recovery, plaintiffs urge the court to consider both its pecuniary and non-pecuniary implications. Because the verdict in this case resulted in the successful assertion of constitutional rights, a goal endorsed by Congress in the legislative history, it must be valued in terms which exceed the monetary damages awarded. All of these elements justify plaintiffs' request for a multiplier of two in the present case.

The reasonableness of plaintiffs' request is supported by other cases in which a multiplier was granted. A brief review of decisions in anti-trust cases and then in public interest cases will inform the Court as the range of possible multipliers. In Lindy, for example, the district court, on remand, doubled the amount obtained by mere application of the hourly rate in order to account for the contingency and quality factors. 382 F.Supp. 999, 1024 (E.D. Pa. 1974). Attorneys in Lindy were awarded a fee of $1,134,855.00 (or $229/hour for 6,000 hours) though criminal prosecutions had preceded the filing of the complaint, though the suit was ultimately settled, and though petitioning counsel received an additional $861,000.00 through private 33.3% contingent fee contracts.

In In re Gypsum Cases, 386 F.Supp. 959 (N.D. Cal. 1974), Judge Zirpoli relied on the Lindy factors and multiplied the hourly rate by three. The court underscored the role of the multiplier in encouraging private enforcement of anti-trust laws.

In Philadelphia v. Charles Pfizer and Co. Inc., 345 F.Supp. 454 (S.C. N.Y. 1972), plaintiffs' counsel were awarded $600,000.00 or an average of $300.00 per hour. This fee was awarded despite the fact that most of the hours were devoted to fairly uncomplicated work, some of which was said to be duplicative, unwise or unnecessary. In Arenson v. Board of Trade of City of Chicago, 373 F.Supp. 1349 (N.D. Ill. 1974), a multiplier of four was awarded. Finally, in an unpublished opinion in Goldstein v. Alodex Corp., Civ. No. TI — 1857 (E.D. Pa., Dec. 7, 1973), a multiplier of five was awarded.

Congress, in suggesting that antitrust multipliers be the model in awards pursuant to section 1988, was not breaking new ground. In many earlier public interest cases decided in this Circuit, multipliers had been awarded based on the same factors emphasized in Lindy — contingency of the case and the quality of representation. See, e.g., Coalition for Los Angeles Planning in the Public Interest v. Board of Supervisors, L.A. Sup. Ct. No. C-63218 (1976) (multiplier of two in environmental lawsuit); Serrano v. Priest, No. C-933-254 (L.A. Co. Sup. Ct. April 1975) (multiplier of two in school financing case); Davis v. County of Los Angeles, 8 EPD ¶9444 (C.D. Ca. 1974) (bonus of $7,193.42 in employment discrimination case); WACO v. Alioto, C-70-1335-WTS (Findings and Recommendations Re Attorneys' Fees, September 19, 1974) (multiplier of two and multiplication again by a 50% factor in section 1983 employment discrimination case). Thus, the courts of this Circuit have recognized that multipliers, just as they encourage private enforcement of anti-trust laws, further the vindication of important rights and policies in public interest cases. To maximize the impact of attorneys' fees acts, the fees awarded "should be large enough to make the case desirable despite the risk of loss." Palmer v. Rogers, 10 E.P.D. ¶10,499 at 6131 (D.D.C. 1975) (Title VII action).

Courts in the Ninth Circuit, in accordance with the legislative history of section 1988 and with the decisions in other public interest cases, have, moreover, awarded multipliers and bonus awards in cases brought under the Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act. In Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 64 F.R.D. 680 (N.D. Cal. 1974), the district court awarded a bonus of $10,000.00; this award, as noted above, was later approved by the Ninth Circuit as consistent with section 1988. Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 550 F.2d 464 (9th Cir. 1977). More recently, in Keith v. Volpe, No. CV-72-335-HP (C.D. Cal., March 31, 1980), Judge Pregerson reaffirmed the Lindy, method of computing reasonable attorney's fees awarding plaintiffs a multiplier of 3.5. Such a multiplier was intended to reflect the contingent nature of the case, the quality of counsel's efforts, the effect of the delay between the time services were rendered and the date in which the order determining fees was entered, and finally, the impact of inflation. Keith v. Volpe, supra at 27.

Plaintiffs contend that the use of a multiplier is appropriate in this case. It is justified by the legislative history, by similar awards in public interest and anti-trust cases, and by awards granted pursuant to section 1988 within the Ninth Circuit. Moreover, the two factors which weigh most heavily in favor of a multiplier — quality of representation and the contingent nature of success — compel such an award in the present case. Finally, a multiplier is appropriate because it reinforces the policies of section 1988 by providing attorneys with an incentive to litigate legitimate civil rights claims even when the theoretical and practical obstacles are great.

C. COMPENSATION FOR TIME SPENT IN APPLYING FOR FEES

Plaintiffs seek to recover attorneys' fees for time spent by their counsel in preparing and presenting this motion. The propriety of such an award becomes evident when viewed in light of the legislative history and the policies of section 1988. The Senate Report recognized that "civil rights laws depend heavily upon private enforcement, and fee awards have proved an essential remedy if private citizens are to have a meaningful opportunity to vindicate the important Congressional policies which these laws contain." S.Rep.No. 94-1011, 94th Cong. 2nd Sess. 2 (1976). The "essential remedy" sought to be afforded by section 1988 will be significantly diluted if attorneys are not compensated for time spent in applying for fees. See, e.g., Prandini v. National Tea Co., 585 F.2d 47, 53 (3d Cir. 1978).

Much time has been devoted to preparing the motion for fees in this case. Plaintiffs' counsel, in addition to establishing the legal basis for their entitlement to fees, have had to sift through records and accounts generated during the last five years. Moreover, there is no assurance that further litigation relating to the matter of fees will not ensue. As the court in Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 64 F.R.D. 680, 684 (N.D. Cal. 1974) noted, if such work were not compensated, it "would allow parties to dilute the value of a fees award by forcing attorneys into extensive uncompensated litigation in order to gain fees." By allowing attorneys' fees for the time spent on the fee question, this Court can prevent potential disincentives to attorneys undertaking civil rights litigation, and thus further the policies of section 1988.

D. LAWCLERK AND PARALEGAL SERVICES

Plaintiffs request the Court to include charges for law clerk/paralegal services as part of the attorneys' fees award. The Ninth Circuit has approved the inclusion of these charges in fee awards. See, e.g., Pac. Coast Agr. Export Assn' v. Sunkist Growers, Inc., 526 F.2d 1196, 1210 (9th Cir. 1975); cert. den. 425 U.S. 959 (1976) (award of fees for work of legal assistants in anti-trust action); Keith v. Volpe, No. CV-72-355-HP 24 (C.D.Cal., March 31, 1980) (section 1983 action). In allowing law clerk and paralegal charges in Keith, Judge Pregerson recognized that lawclerks and paralegals provide necessary services which, were they performed by attorneys, would be more costly. On this basis, plaintiffs have submitted law clerk time as part of their motion for fees.

E. COSTS AND EXPENDITURES

Plaintiffs contend that travel expenses necessarily incurred during the course of litigation should be awarded. In Keith v. Volpe, No. CV-72-355-HP 27 (1980), plaintiffs were awarded out of town travel expenses. The Court recognized that these expenditures were of the type which would ordinarily be charged to the client and concluded that equity required that plaintiffs counsel be reimbursed. See also, Sprague v. Ticonic Nat'l Bank, 307 U.S. 161, 165 (1939) (power of court to award "as much of the entire expenses of the litigation of one of the parties as fair justice to the other party will permit ...") In the present case an award of travel expenses is equally justified. Plaintiffs' attorneys, residents of San Diego, made numerous trips to Los Angeles and to Riverside in connection with the litigation. These expenses are not compensated by an award of fees and should be granted in addition to any fees awarded in this case.

IV

PLAINTIFFS ARE ENTITLED TO AN INTERIM AWARD OF FEES

Having prevailed in the instant action, plaintiffs contend that they are entitled to an interim award of fees. Plaintiff's attorneys have expended considerable time and expense over a five year period without compensation. As outlined in plaintiffs points and authorities above, the legislative history of Section 1988 clearly indicates that attorney fee awards are an important component of Congress' efforts to insure that even the poor will have access to the Courts to vindicate Constitutional rights. While Section 1988 does not provide a specific time for the awarding of attorney fees, it is reasonable to conclude that the awarding of interim fees promotes the vigilant protection of constitutional rights and promotes the public policy embodied in the Civil Rights Acts.

The Ninth Circuit, as well as other circuits, has recognized the propriety of awarding interim attorney fees. Shaeffer v. San Diego Yellow Cabs, Inc., 462 F.2d 1002 (9th Cir. 1972) (description without comment by Ninth Circuit of interim fee procedure utilized by District Court); Davis v. County of Los Angeles, 8 FEP Cases 244, 8 E.P.D. ¶ 9444 (C.D. Calif. 1974) ($60,000 interim fee award made without discussion of pending appeal and without the requirement of a bond); Peters v. Missouri Pacific R.R. Co., 3 E.P.D. ¶ 8274 (E.D. Tex. 1971) (fees awarded by District Court, wtithout (sic) mention of pending appeal, but the existence of such an appeal is shown by appellate court decision at 483 F.2d 490 (5th Cir. 1973)). See also Highway Truck Drivers and Helpers Local 107 v. Cohen, 220 F.Supp. 735 (E.D. Pa. 1973) (fees awarded despite pending appeal in case under Labor Management Reporting and Disclosure Act). In Malone v. North American Rockwell Corporation, 457 F.2d 779 (9th Cir. 1972), the Ninth Circuit held that plaintiffs were entitled to an interim award even though they had prevailed solely on a procedural issue (the Title VII Statute of Limitations) and despite the fact that there had not been a decision on the merits. See also Kaplan v. Iatse, 525 F.2d 1354 (9th Cir. 1975).

Moreover, the Second Circuit has recently held in Johnson v. University of Bridgeport, Doc. Nos. 80-7350, 80-7374 (August 28, 1980), that an award of attorneys' fees is an integral part of the relief sought in a civil rights action and therefore the judgment is not final and appealable until they have been set by the court.

Plaintiffs assert that interim attorneys' fees in the instant case are not only proper, but said award would promote the underlying policy of Section 1988.

V

CONCLUSION

Based on the facts and points outlined above as well as in the affidavits and exhibits attached hereto, it is submitted that the amount of time expended on this case is reasonable, that the hourly rates requested are reasonable, that a multiplier or bonus is appropriate in this case, and that therefore this Honorable Court should make an award herein of $495,713.51 as follows:

Law clerk/paralegal hours	$ 2,112.50
Hours expended by Roy B. Cazares 692.75 hours X $125.00 per hour = $86,593.75 X multiplier of two (2) =	$173,187.50
Hours expended by Gerald Paul Lopez, 1,265.50 X $125.00 = 158,187.50 X multiplier of two (2) =	$316,375.00
Costs incurred (Exhibit C)	$ 4,038.50
TOTAL AWARD REQUESTED	$495,713.51

DATED: 12/1/80

Respectfully submitted,

NO. CV 76-1803-MRP

AFFIDAVIT OF GERALD P. LOPEZ

RE: AMOUNT OF ATTORNEYS FEES REQUESTED

GERALD P. LOPEZ, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. I am co-counsel for the plaintiffs in the above-captioned action. I make this affidavit in order to bring to the Court's attention certain facts which are relevant to the amount of fees requested in the accompanying application.

2. The memorandum of law filed concurrently with this affidavit shows that in determining the amount of the fees to be awarded, the usual practice is for the Court first to determine the number of hours expended and the appropriate hourly rate and then to calculate a base figure, a "lodestar", based on hours expended times hourly rate. The next step is to make adjustments from the base figure based on such factors as the contingent nature of the receipt of the fees and the result obtained for those represented. With this in mind, the remainder of this affidavit is divided into four sections, as follows: The Attorneys' Hourly Rates; The Number of Hours Expended; The Appropriate Adjustments to the Normal Rates; and The Conclusion.

HOURLY RATES

3. The experience and background of the attorneys involved are, of course, relevant to the hourly rate to be awarded. The Court should therefore be aware of the following facts:

a. I was graduated from Harvard Law School in 1974. From 1974 to 1975 I was the law clerk to the Hon. Edward J. Schwartz, Chief Judge of the United States District Court, Southern District of California. In 1975 I opened my own practice, along with Roy B. Cazares (and two other persons) and since that time, have been associated with Mr. Cazares, either as full-time partner or as of-counsel.

b. I have, since 1976, associated myself with Mr. Cazares only on civil rights cases. As Mr. Cazares' affidavit described, we have been reasonably successful in representing diverse clients with difficult and sophisticated claims.

c. In 1976 I began teaching law first in San Diego and then, beginning in the fall, 1978, at the UCLA School of Law. I teach one of only a handful of courses in this country devoted exclusively to civil rights legislation, and also teach a civil rights litigation seminar. In addition to my teaching responsibilities at UCLA, I have often been invited by groups throughout the state to lecture on civil rights litigation, particularly § 1983 claims.

4. It is submitted that the $125.00 per hour request I am making in this case is reasonable for the following reasons: (a) I have concentrated on civil rights litigation since I finished my judicial clerkship in 1975, thereby making me more experienced, more efficient and, hopefully, more effective than others who litigate such claims (b) the "going rate" in Los Angeles for an attorney with my experience and background ranges between $125.00 and $150.00 per hour.

II

HOURS EXPENDED

5. To date I have expended 1,265.50 hours on the prosecution of this case. This time can be generally described as having been expended in legal research of often novel yet necessary theories, in preparation of pleadings and motion papers, in discovery, in opposing motions to dismiss and motions for summary judgment, in interviewing plaintiffs and witnesses, in answering interrogatories, in analyzing police reports, in compelling unanswered or improperly objected interrogatories and requests for production, in preparing for depositions, in summarizing depositions and reviewing deposition summaries, in preparing the pre-trial order and memoranda of contentions of fact and law, in outlining questions for witnesses at trial, in preparing instructions, in other trial preparation in conference with plaintiffs and co-counsel, and in reviewing and analyzing responses in discovery.

6. The primary reason that the number of hours expended is large is because of the breadth and complexity of the case. As this Court is well aware, both the state of the law and the state of the facts as of 1975 and 1976 required innovative lawyering and investigating; there was no blueprint for this case when be brought these claims.

7. A secondary reason that this case involved many hours of labor was the litigious nature of defendants. We do not desire to belabor the point, but it is not unimportant that access to obviously relevant discovery was blockaded at every turn; that legal issues were often and persistently misinterpreted and misconstrued; that objections to discovery, exhibits and witnesses were often at best tenuous, even incomprehensible. It also merits this Court's attention that a group of defendants (granted Summary Judgment by Judge Ferguson) and their counsel found it appropriate to file a malicious prosecution complaint against both our clients and ouselves (sic) in the Riverside Superior Court. Only extraordinary effort to remove the case to federal court—where it was dismissed by Judge Ferguson—avoided the burden of defending that allegedly good faith claim at the same time plaintiffs were prosecuting this action. Finally, and perhaps the best evidence of the litigious nature of defendants, the number of hours expended is great because defendants never once made a reasonable settlement offer. Trial, as this Court is aware, was necessary to vindicate our clients rights.

ADJUSTMENTS TO HOURLY RATES

8. A multiplier or "bonus" award should be afforded above the normal hourly billing rates. As both the accompanying Memorandum of Law and affidavit of Mr. Cazares explain, such a multiplier is not only appropriate, but perhaps paradigmatically so if citizens are to continue to value the rights of the national community. It is not difficult to imagine that absent such bonuses fewer and fewer attorneys willing to risk a good portion of their professional lives on difficult and highly contingent claims.

IV

CONCLUSION

9. Based on the facts and points outlined above as well as in the other affidavits and in the brief submitted herein, it is submitted that the amount of time expended on this case is reasonable, that the hourly rates requested are reasonable, that a multiplier or bonus is appropriate in this case, and that therefore this Court should make an award herein of $495,713.51.

AFFIDAVIT OF ROY B. CAZARES
RE: REQUEST FOR ATTORNEYS FEES

ROY B. CAZARES, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. I am co-counsel for the plaintiffs in the above-captioned action. I make this affidavit in order to bring certain facts to the Court's attention which are relevant to the amount of attorney's fees requested in plaintiff's application for attorney's fees.

2. Initially, it should be stated that during the settlement conference on August 31, 1979, this Honroable (sic) Court informed Counsel for Defendants that the case was complex and that plaintiffs were fully entitled to legal representation. This Court directed defendant's attorney to consider the substantial exposure of defendants to attorney fees alone, and advised counsel to consider said exposure in discussing settlement. Attorney for defendants returned to the settlement conference and repeated his principal's position that they would not offer more than $10,000.00 in full settlement of all claims including attorney fees. This offer to settle all claims including attorney fees was made after five years of extensive pretrial discovery and litigation. Counsel for defendants knew or should have known that expenses alone nearly totalled $7,000.00.

3. The memorandum of law filed concurrently with this affidavit shows that in determining the amount of the fees to be awarded, the usual practice is for the Court first to determine the normal hourly rates charged and the number of hours expended on the case and then to calculate a base figure based on hourly rates times number of hours expended. The next step then is to make adjustments from the base figure based on such factors as the contingent nature of the receipt of fees and the result obtained for the represented plaintiffs. With this in mind, the remainder of this affidavit is divided into four sections, as follows: The Attorneys' Hourly Rates;

The Number of Hours Expended; The Appropriate Adjustments To The Normal Rates; and the Conclusion.

I

HOURLY RATES

4. The experience and background of the attorneys involved is relevant to the hourly rate to be awarded. Therefore, affiant respectfully invites the Court's attention to the following facts:

a. I graduated from San Diego State College with honors and with distinction in 1970, I graduated from Harvard Law School in 1973. Between July of 1973 and May of 1975, I was employed as a staff trial attorney with the Defenders Program of San Diego County. As a trial attorney with the Defenders Program, I was responsible for all phases of litigation in criminal defense for indigents. I handled virtually every single type of offender and represented clients in various forums such as the Municipal Court, Superior Court, Court of Appeals, Juvenile Court, Family Law Court, Mental Health Court, Parole Hearings, California Rehabilitation Center Exclusion Hearings, Mentally Disordered Sex Offender Hearings, Civil Addict Program Hearings and Welfare Board Hearings. I was solely responsible for all phases of the cases from initial bail reviews to exhaustion of appellate relief. I prepared and argued numerous pre-trial motions, extraordinary writs, appeals and motions for past conviction relief. I handled in excess of five hundred criminal cases of which many went to jury trial in the Superior Court.

b. In May of 1975, I started private practice with the firm of Jones, Cazares, Adler and Lopez. The firm handled a general practice with a strong emphasis on civil rights and representation of low income clients. Since entering private practice I have been involved in cases such as the following: Aleman v. Alvarado, Laborers Local 89, Civil Case No. 76-407-T, S.D. Cal. The "Local 89" case arose out of complaints made to affiant that union leaders were mishandling various pension funds. Affiant obtained the cooperation of the United States Attorney in prosecuting union leaders while plaintiffs sought civil relief. Ultimately seventeen union officers or ex-officials were convicted and ordered to pay restitution to the union.

United States of America, Chicano Federation, et al., v. San Diego County, et al., Civil Case No. 76-1094-S, S.D. Cal. As attorney for plaintiff Chicano Federation of San Diego County, Inc., a party plaintiff, I was directly responsible for the implementation of a five year consent decree that provides broad based relief for Chicanos, women, blacks and Pan-Asians who have suffered the effects of past employment discrimination in County hiring, promotion, training and transfer policies. I have been involved in challenging hiring tests in terms of reliability and validity. I obtained an injunction against the County Board of Supervisors to prevent them from circumventing the Consent Decree and I have assisted in analysis of progress towards meeting interim goals in the Decree.

Lisa Martine Pliscou by her Guardian Ad Litem, Norm Pliscou v. Holtville Unified School District, Civil Case No. 75-0926-GT. Our firm represented a young high school student in protecting her rights guaranteed under the First Amendment to the Constitution. We were the prevailing party.

The People of the State of California v. Federico Frank, Patricia Zerda Zerda, et al., Crim No. 39862, Superior Court, San Diego County. I represented Patricia Zerda Zerda in a multiple defendant murder trial that lasted approximately five months. It was the longest murder trial in the history of San Diego County at the time and involved unique legal issues. The case involved Colombian and Swiss nationals arrested in the Republic of Mexico for a homicide committed in San Diego. The Court specifically requested that I participate in the defense.

Berry, et al., v. City of San Diego. This was a Title VII class action in which we represented the discriminatory hiring practices of the San Diego Police Department and defendant City of San Diego. Six of the eight named plaintiffs were reinstated with back pay and broad based relief for the class was insured by a consent decree entered into by the parties.

In addition to approximately seventy five actual trials in the state courts, I have been retained to try various cases in the Federal District Court. As a litigation specialist I have also represented clients before a variety of other hearings such as formal labor arbitrations (I've won 12 out of 15 arbitrations), Department of Motor Vehicle Hearings, Insurance Arbitration Hearing, National Labor Relations Board Hearings, U.S. Customs Hearings, Immigration and Naturalization Service Hearings on deportations and exclusions, Social Security Administration Hearings, Administrative Law Hearings re: Longshoremen and Harbor Workers' Act, California Labor Commission Hearings, California OSHA Hearings and U.S. Department of Labor Hearings.

c. I have received awards and certificates of appreciation from the following:

Cabrillo Foundation, award for outstanding community services; San Diego Legal Aid Society for service to the Board of Directors, 1979 Joint California State Legislature Resolution For Outstanding Leadership in the are (sic) of Civil Rights,

San Diego County Fiscal and Justice Planning Agency for service to the Board of Advisors, La Raza Lawyers Association for service as first President of the Association.

I have served on various boards and commissions such as:

Commission of the Californias

Legal Aid Society

National Conference of Christians and Jews

California Rural Legal Assistance, Inc.

San Diego County Fiscal and Justice Board

Chicano Federation, Justice Committee

Alba 80 Society (Scholarship Foundation)

Sweetwater Unified School District

Title I Advisory Committee

Chicano Free Clinic Board

d. In addition to practicing law, I have taught Police Community Relations at Southwestern College and Civil Rights, Constitutional Law and Immigration Law and Practice at San Diego State University. I have lectured to attorney groups on international law between Mexico and the United States and have consulted with other attorneys on how to litigate immigration, personal injury and civil rights cases. I have lectured to the Association of Mexican American Educators, California Association of Bilingual Educators, the San Diego Policy Academy, San Diego City Schools, San Diego County Schools and a number of college university, and high school classes.

5. It is submitted that the $125.00 per hour request I am making in this case is reasonable because:

a. In the five years since I started working on this case, inflationary pressures have caused a rise in the normal hourly rate charged by attorneys.

b. I have extensive litigation experience over a broad range of legal issues and I am therefore considered more experienced than most attorneys with seven years in practice.

c. The issues in the case were complex and probably beyond the expertise of lawyers with less experience.

d. The normal rate for complex litigation in Los Angeles is $150.00 per hour.

II

HOURS EXPENDED

6. To date I have expended 681.25 hours in the preparation and and (sic) prosecution of this case. In general, I have spent much of the time in discovery, depositions, witness interviews, legal research, answering interrogatories, investigation, preparation for pretrial conferences, reviewing extensive police reports, preparing for trial and trial. I have made numerous trips to Los Angeles and Riverside to prepare for trial. The law of the case changed frequently and dramatically during the pretrial stages, thus necessitating expanding discovery to conform to emerging doctrines.

Plaintiffs in this case could not retain local counsel to represent them because of the highly politicized background of the case. Two weeks after the incident giving rise to this lawsuit, Chicanos from Casa Blanca openly rebelled against perceived police abuses against them. Several police officers and civilians were injured and property damage was high. The Casa Blanca incidents received national press and the Program 60 Minutes did a series on police community problems in Riverside. Your affiant and his law partners accepted the case because we felt it had great merit and because it was our opinion that the plaintiffs would go unrepresented if they had to rely on local atotrneys (sic). Therefore, of necessity, the case was such that it required many hours of travel time both to the site of the incident and to the Federal Court in Los Angeles.

Attached hereto is exhibit A which describes the activity engaged in by affiant during the time billed.

7. I have reviewed the following records of hours expended by law clerks Julie Davis and Mark Crowley and the hours expneded (sic) appear to be reasonable:

Julie Davis:

Total paralegal/law clerk time expended	$2,112.50

IV

ADJUSTMENTS TO HOURLY RATES

8. A multiplier or "bonus" award should be afforded in this case above the normal hourly billing rates. The multiplier which plaintiffs seek in this case is 2.00 times the hourly rates for attorneys. We ask that this multiplier be applied only to the normal billing rates of Messrs. Cazares and Lopez; we do not ask that the multiplier be applied to the law clerk and paralegal rates. For Messrs. Cazares and Lopez, the total fees requested total $244,781.25. When the multiplier of 2.00 is applied to this figure, the total is $489,562.50. In turn, when to this figure is added the charges for the paralegal and law clerk time, and the disbursements our total fee request amounts to $495,713.51.

9. There are several reasons that a "multiplier" or bonus award is approprite in the instant case. The law on the point is fully discussed in the "Plaintiffs' Memorandum of Points and Authorities In Support of Motion For Attorneys' Fees", submitted concurrently with this affidavit.

10. Plaintiffs believe that the principle reason that a multiplier award should be made in this case is because it would encourage other attorneys to represent low income plaintiffs in important civil rights cases on a contingent fee basis. It is only fair and reasonable that attorneys willing to assume these type of cases be reimbursed in such a fashion that insures that lawyers will be willing to represent even those who cannot afford to pay or to advance costs. Plaintiffs believe that the vindication of constitutional rights is equally as important as the protection afforded the free market economy by successful antitrust litigants. Many attorneys will only protect the poor or the unpopular against constitutional deprivations if they can feel reasonably assured that their commitment to that cause will be recognized as a service to the community as well as the litigants. The poor, the unpopular and those lacking in power have the same rights to preserve their dignity as everyone else. To the extent that courts encourage the protection of their constitutional rights, society in general is served.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

INTRODUCTION

On October 7, 1980, the jury, in the above-entitled matter awarded Plaintiffs judgment in the total amount of $33,350.00—a sum that represented only a small fraction of the multi-million dollar recovery originally sought by Plaintiffs herein. Subsequent questions by a Los Angeles Times reporter (See 'Latinos, Police Both Claim Victories in Riverside Suit,' Los Angeles Times CC Part II 1,6 (Nov. 16, 1980) attached hereto as Exhibit "A" and incorporated herein by this reference as though set forth verbatim hereat) revealed that the jury foreman, Rene Wong, said: "We wanted the Riveras [Plaintiffs] to get something for putting up with the case for five years. But we didn't see any strong evidence to tell us to give them a whole lot of money, either." Mrs. Wong indicated to the Times reporter that "The jury had no idea the Latinos had sued for such a large sum in damages."

After the verdicts were read by the Court, counsel for Plaintiffs said: "On behalf of the Plaintiffs and their counsel, we will be making a motion for attorneys fees and perhaps a motion for additur." (See Reporter's Transcript p. 3 ll. 16-18 attached hereto as Exhibit "B" and incorporated herein as though set forth verbatim hereat.)

Prior to any such motions being filed, the Court informed Defendants' counsel that: "Now, the only thing I tell you Mr. Kotler, is that he [Plaintiffs' counsel] is going to get substantial attorneys fees, because this is a lot of time we're talking about." The Court continued, (R.T. p. 6 ll. 5-9) "My disposition now, so that you would be aware of it, is that I would give Mr. Cazares the attorney's fees that cover everything that he did that's legitimate so that the burden of the attorney's fees does not fall on the parties." The Court concluded (R.T. p. 6, ll. 23-25, p. 7, l. 1) "And the final thing I say is that I have no quarrel with the quality of what he did. So if I have no quarrel with the quality and he gives me the hours, I will compensate him. And you'll [Mr. Cazares] have to tell me the rate."

On December 5, 1980, Plaintiffs' counsel filed their motion for attorneys fees and costs. They did not file a motion for additur, which might have gotten more money for their clients but rather, merely filed a self-serving motion for attorneys fees. The motion for attorneys fees appears to be a brazen attempt to obtain from the Court as attorneys fees 16 times the amount awarded to the Plaintiffs by the triers of fact—the jury.

Plaintiffs' last non-negotiable demand was for the sum of $320,000.00. The total amount of judgment awarded in this case, however, was approximately 10% of that amount, the sum of only $33,350.00. Only six of the original 32 Defendants have had verdicts rendered against them by the jury. Eighteen of these Defendants were dismissed earlier in this case after motions for summary judgment, the Court finding that there was no triable issue of fact against any of them as to any claim pleaded by Plaintiffs.

This case did not involve a class action. Rather, eight citizens of the City of Riverside recovered amounts varying from $8,500.00 to $700.00. No injunctive or declaratory relief was requested or awarded at time of trial, although such relief had been sought by the Complaint filed herein. No policy changes of Defendant Riverside Police Department have been requested or made as a result of this trial, although, again, such was sought by the Complaint, though later dropped. Therefore, this litigation has in no way resulted in any long-range benefit for the community.

At no time during the trial did Plaintiffs' counsel attempt to vindicate the rights of an "oppressed minority." Plaintiffs in this case were middle class, fully employed, members of the Riverside community. At no time during the trial did the Plaintiffs claim that they had suffered discrimination on the basis of their race, color, or creed. This claim too, had been raised by the Complaint filed by Plaintiffs, and like the above-referenced claims, dropped by the time of the pretrial for lack of evidence.

Plaintiffs' attorneys have now petitioned this Honorable Court for fees which amount to nearly a half million dollars, or sixteen times the total amount of the jury award. Defendants respectfully contend that such a request is not only unreasonable, but is unconscionable under the circumstances of this case. It is a bold attempt by counsel to reap their own benefits from the case—and nothing more.

POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ATTORNEYS' FEES WHEN REQUESTED, MUST BE REASONABLE.

"Courts must remember that they do not have a mandate . . . to make the prevailing counsel rich."

Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., 488 F.2d 714, 719 (5th Cir. 1974).

In discussing the statute authorizing attorneys' fee awards in an equal employment opportunity case, the Fifth Circuit found that the statute was not passed for the benefit of attorneys, but rather to enable litigants to obtain competent counsel worthy of contest with the caliber of counsel available to their opposition and to fairly place the economic burden of such litigation. Johnson, supra, at 719.

Johnson is quoted in McPherson v. School District #186, Springfield. (sic) Illinois, 465 F. Supp. 749, 756 (S.D. Ill. 1978) wherein the Court observed that:

> "The Court in Johnson cogently states that there is no duty to make counsel for prevailing party rich. These standards were not passed for the benefit of attorneys, but to enable litigants to obtain counsel to preserve rights secured by the Constitution or Laws of the United States."

In Keyes v. School Dist. No.1, Denver, Colo., 439 F. Supp. 393 (D. Colo. 1977), another civil rights case, the court outlined a "preferable method of computing an hourly figure for compensation." The method employed "is to consider all the factors . . .' and then arrive at an hourly rate or other figure which will represent fair and reasonable compensation, compatible to that which might be received in commercial litigation." Keyes, supra, at 413.

The Keyes Court also indicated that in computing attorneys fees awards in civil rights cases that,

> "several courts have taken into account payments authorized under the Criminal Justice Act, 18 USC §3006 A(d) for compensation to attorneys who represent indigent defendants in criminal cases.

E.E.O.C. v. Enterprise Ass'n. Steamfitters Local 638, 542 F.2d 579, 593 n.12 (2nd Cir. 1976); Panior v. Iberville Parish School Bd., 543 F.2d 1117, 1119 n.6 (5th Cir. 1976); Knight v. Auciello, 453 F.2d 852 (1st Cir. 1972); Thompson v. School Bd., 363 F.Supp. 458, 465 (E.D. Va. 1973). The current authorization under the Act is generally $30.00 per hour for in-court service and $20.00 per hour for out-of-court time." Keyes, supra, at 414.

In Scott v. Bradley, 455 F.Supp. 672 (E.D. Va. 1978), an employment discrimination case, attorneys fees in the amount of one-third of the recovery were found to be adequate. The Scott court acknowledged the primary purpose behind the Civil Rights Attorneys Fees Award Act was to encourage lawyers to represent persons in the civil rights field; however, the court concluded:

"A one-third contingent fee in the field of personal injury has proved most efficacious in encouraging counsel to represent injured plaintiffs in even the marginal cases of doubtful liability and transitory injury. There is no reason to believe similar awards where compensatory damages, as here, are substantial would not have the same effect in civil rights cases." Scott, supra, at 673.

The Court went on: "[E]ven without such protective legislation lawyers have been massively encouraged to enter the personal injury field upon the expectation of being compensated on a contingent fee basis." Scott, supra, at 674.

In Scott the Plaintiff was awarded compensatory damages in the amount of $4,350.00.

"The Court recognizes that many types of civil rights cases do not result in any monetary reward and others result in only minimal monetary awards. Obviously, in such cases, a percentage fee would be inappropriate. This is not such a case, however, and the Court need not base a fee determination on conditions contrary to fact." Scott, supra, at 674.

In the case at hand one-third of the $33,350.00 award received by Plaintiffs is not a half-million dollars.

Based on the Scott guidelines, there is no reason to provide an economic windfall to Plaintiffs' counsel by awarding them sixteen times the award received by Plaintiffs in the instant action.

The Scott court continues at 675:

> "The Court must also bear in mind that while lawyers are to be encouraged to accept civil rights cases they should not be encouraged to take over the cases. . . . Had the court awarded the sum sought the case would have been the lawyer's case with the client as an appendage. . . . The lawyer cannot be permitted to subsume the case."

Scott continues, "the amount of the verdict is often a good indicator of the reasonableness of the time expended and fee to be awarded." Scott, supra, at 675.

The Scott court could well have had the instant case in mind when warning that civil rights attorneys should be encouraged to represent plaintiffs, but should not be encouraged to over-prepare the case. According to the affidavit submitted by Gerald P. Lopez with the motion for attorneys fees, during the month of September 1980, he expended 73.5 hours, though he fails to indicate by breakdown how these hours were spent. The Court is asked to recall pages of jury instructions prepared by Mr. Lopez, and tossed aside by the Court, who indicated that Mr. Lopez's instructions would be unintelligible to the average juror. Scott, supra, at 674, reminds us that "[s]erious criminal offenses often draw fines of lesser magnitude than the aggregate of payments to be required of defendants in Plaintiff's proposal. Though a civil rights violation is a serious offense, it is, after all, a civil offense, not crime."

DETERMINATION OF LODESTAR

In Kerr v. Screen Extras Guild, Inc., 526 F.2d at 70, the Ninth Circuit adopted the twelve factors set forth in Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., 488 F.2d 714 (5th Cir. 1974), as appropriate guidelines which courts should consider in determining reasonable attorneys fees. The twelve factors listed in Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., 488 F.2d 714, 717-719 (5th Cir. 1974), are:

1. The time and labor required;
2. The novelty and difficulty of the questions;
3. The skill requesite (sic) to perform the legal service properly;
4. The preclusion of other employment due to acceptance of the case;
5. The customary fee;
6. The contingent or fixed nature of the fee;
7. The time limitations imposed by the client or the case;
8. The amount involved and the results obtained;
9. The experience, reputation, and ability of the attorneys;
10. The undesirability of the case;
11. The nature of the professional relationship with the client; and,
12. Awards in similar cases.

Each of the foregoing factors will be examined in an attempt to assist the Court in its determination of what is a reasonable fee in this case.

A. THE TIME AND LABOR SPENT MUST BE REASONABLE.

The Court must first consider whether it was reasonable for Plaintiffs in this case to obtain out-of-the-area counsel (Mr. Cazares) when it was obvious that every time he had to investigate or appear in court there would be at least five hours of travel time involved.

In McPherson v. School District #186. Springfield, Illinois, 465 F.Supp. 749 (S.D. Ill. 1978), the Court made such an inquiry. In that case, as in the one at hand, it had not been shown whether any local attorney of comparable ability would have accepted the case.

In the case at hand, both counsel from San Diego (Mr. Cazares) and from Los Angeles (Mr. Lopez), were retained by Plaintiffs. However, time and time again the San Diego counsel made appearances in Los Angeles, while there was no explanation offered by Plaintiffs' counsel as to why it would not have been less costly and more appropriate for the Los Angeles counsel to have made the same appearance instead. One example as indicated in the hours submitted by Roy B. Cazares, are those hours from 9/29/80 until 10/7/80, comprising over fifty hours, during which time Mr. Cazares "stood by" for jury deliberations after traveling from San Diego to Los Angeles (sometimes daily). No indication has been by counsel for Plaintiffs herein why it was necessary for Mr. Cazares to spend this time, rather than have Mr. Lopez, who was already in Los Angeles during that time period, available as the "stand by" during that time period. Defense counsel whose office is in Beverly Hills, were on 30-minute notice from the Court. There has been no explanation of why Mr. Lopez could not similarly have been on 30-minute notice from Court, rather than requiring Mr. Cazares to camp-out for over a week on a full-time basis in Los Angeles awaiting the verdict.

Granted that when the witnesses are located in Riverside and the court in Los Angeles, there will obviously be a certain amount of travel time required of all counsel. The point, however, is that had Plaintiffs been paying an hourly fee to their counsel it is likely that counsel would have been required to make a more judicious allocation of labor between the two co-counsel (the Los Angeles counsel and the San Diego counsel) to prevent the travel time aspect from getting economically out of proportion, as here.

In McPherson, supra, at 758, Judge Ackerman points out:

> "In my opinion time spent traveling should not be compensated at the same hourly rate as office or court time. Efficiency is decreased and many times the circumstances allow little, if any productive effort."

Judge Ackerman counsequently (sic) reduced the hourly rate he found reasonable for attorneys for travel time.

In Oliver v. Kalamazoo Board of Education, 576 F.2d 714, 717 (6th Cir. 1978) the court found it incumbent to make a detailed analysis of how the attorney's time was spent:

> "I do not believe that attorneys should receive the same hourly rate, as was allowed here, for every type of service which they perform. Thus, for example, time spent traveling should not be compensated at the same hourly rate as time spent in court, or time spent in the office looking up law, or talking on the telephone."

In McManama v. Lukhardt, 464 F.Supp. 38 (W.D. Va. 1978), a class action civil rights suit, the court came to the conclusion that a lower rate must also be applied to hours spent on research, drafting, and other preparation, than for time that is actually spent in court. McManama, supra, at 43.

Thus, what is being respectfully suggested is that both the number of hours allowed by this Court and the rate at which the allowable hours are compensated, should be closely scrutinized and greatly reduced by this Honorable Court.

B. FEE-PETITIONERS HAVE FAILED TO SHOW THAT THE QUESTIONS PRESENTED BY THIS CASE ARE EXCEPTIONALLY NOVEL OR DIFFICULT.

A second factor suggested by Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., supra, is to look to the novelty and difficulty of the questions presented.

As the Court is well aware, this is hardly the first civil rights 1983 action brought on the basis of state torts which has come before this or other courts. Fee-petitioners did not suggest any novel approach to the law, unless one could consider novel the fact that they suggested many unsuccessful avenues of recovery, most of which were dropped by the time of the pretrial after spending literally hundreds of hours on them—of Plaintiffs' counsel, defense counsel, and the Court. An attempt to support claims which have no basis in law or fact in this day of crowded dockets, can hardly be considered novel and thereby support additional amounts in fee awards. It is submitted that Plaintiffs have in no way prevailed on any type of novel theory in this case—let alone gone to the jury on any such theory.

The questions raised by this case were relatively simple. This was not a case of first impression. It did not involve complex anti-trust issues. It was not even a class action. It merely involved interpretation of constitutional law and tort law issues which courts and attorneys have been analysing throughout the history of our judicial system. Perhaps the only difficult question of this case is the one before the Court at this point; whether the award of shocking attorneys fees can be justified is a case of minimal jury verdicts on a very small percentage of the claims pleaded, and against a very few defendants sued.

C. FEE-PETITIONERS HAVE SHOWN THAT NO EXCEPTIONAL SKILL WAS REQUIRED TO PERFORM THE LEGAL SERVICES RENDERED HEREIN.

The next factor listed in Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., is the skill requisite to perform the legal services properly. Unlike many civil rights actions, where counsel are called upon to create consent decrees, and otherwise devise innovative methods of resolving the issues, here all that was required was standard trial court skills—nothing more exceptional than would have been necessary for the most mundane of personal injury suits. The Court is asked to look at the results obtained by counsel in the Court's analysis of the skills displayed. A multi-million dollar prayer—a three hundred twenty thousand non-negotiable demand—and a thirty-three thousand dollar recovery.

D. THERE HAS BEEN NO PRECLUSION OF OTHER EMPLOYMENT DUE TO THE ACCEPTANCE OF THIS CASE.

The fourth Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., factor is the preclusion of other employment due to acceptance of the case. Here the practice of each of the co-counsel will be examined individually.

According to Mr. Lopez's own affidavit attached to the motion for fees, he is a full-time university professor at U.C.L.A. Not only has he been able to continue his other employment, but, according to 3 U.C.L.A. Law 15, Spring 1980, attached hereto as Exhibit "C" and incorporated herein by reference as though set forth verbatim hereat, Mr. Lopez, has received time and funding to study the exact same statute at issue in this case. Thus, we submit, Mr. Lopez has hardly been precluded from other employment due to the acceptance of this case, but rather has made this case one of the focal points of his other employment, for which, presumably, he has been fully compensated.

For many months this case has required of Roy Cazares no more than an hour or two per week of his attention. If one scrutinizes his affidavit carefully, it is easy to see that during 45 months of this 63 month case, he has spent less than two hours per week on this matter. Thus, while it appears from the general numbers that this case had a "life" of more than five years, such a figure is quite misleading in that for several months no work was done at all on this case, and during many other months no more than eight hours of Mr. Cazares' time per month were consumed by this case. Therefore, except for the time that was spent in trial, it seems that Mr. Cazares has hardly been precluded from accepting other employment. The post-trial time, as discussed above, to a certain extent, might well have been self-imposed preclusion of other employment due to the decision among co-counsel to have Mr. Cazares stand by in Los Angeles for a week, rather than have Mr.

Lopez, who was already in Los Angeles during that time period, remain on call.

E. THE COURT MUST EVALUATE COUNSELS' CUSTOMARY FEE.

Preston v. Mandeville, 451 F.Supp. 617 (S.D. Alabama 1978), a class action for contempt for failing to abide by a 1975 decree requiring adoption of random jury selection system, construed Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., to set forth the following guidelines on fees: "What is needed is the customary fee charged by these particular lawyers." Preston, supra, at 621. Thus, while the petitioners suggest an hourly rate in the Los Angeles area of $150.00 per hour, at no point do they inform the Court what their hourly rate is.

Moreover, where time is logged over a period of years, the rate must be based on the attorney's rate for each year, not just the 1980 rate in Los Angeles. Thus, while the fee-petitioners implied in their motion that the Court should consider inflation as a factor in setting their rate, they can hardly rightfully request that the Court both allow for inflation and base the hourly rate on 1980 dollars. As Imprisioned Citizens Union v. Shapp, 473 F.Supp. 1017 (E.D. Pa. 1979), sets forth, an attorney cannot be compensated at 1980 rates for hours logged over a five-year period; compensation must be apportioned over that time, at the rates normally charged during the period in which the work was performed.

In Heigler v. Gatter, 463 F.Supp. 802 (E.D. Pa 1978), a civil rights action against city police officers in which $11,566.00 was awarded to plaintiff on the basis of claims made for § 1983, false arrest and imprisonment, assault, and battery, the court first computed the rate for counsel at $50.00 per hour for non-trial time, and $75.00 per hour for trial time, and then looked to the number of hours requested. The court acknowledged in that case, as in the one at hand, that where the time period consumed by the action is particularly long due to court scheduling difficulties, the plaintiffs' attorney is not entitled to additional fees. In our case, as the Court is well aware, counsel have been ready to go to trial for 28 months, although due to the court's crowded schedule, the trial scheduled originally for April 17, 1979, did not finally take place until late September 1980. Thus based on Heigler, supra, at 804, the long time span, over which this action continued—and was continued—was "primarily a function of scheduling difficulties rather than the complexity of the case," and does not form the basis for an award of additional attorneys fees.

F. THE CONTINGENT NATURE OF THE FEE DOES NOT NECESSARILY ENTITLE FEE-PETITIONER TO CARTE BLANCHE IN HIS AWARD.

While Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc. suggests that the court look to the contingent or fixed nature of the fee, this, in and of itself, is not determinative of the fee award issue. This aspect will be discussed in more detail below.

G. THERE WERE NO EXCEPTIONAL TIME LIMITATIONS IMPOSED BY THE CLIENT OR THE CASE.

Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., suggests that time limitations imposed by the client or the case should be a factor the court should consider in awarding fees. The fee-petitioners in this case were never under the eleventh-hour gun on this case in that they were present within three weeks after the incident. They have had ample time throughout this litigation to carefully draft all of their pleadings and perform all discovery they felt necessary. The fee-petitioners were never in the position of picking up another attorneys scattered files two weeks before time of trial. They were never in a rush to avoid a statute of limitations deadline, and they could in all instances prepare their pleadings and schedule discovery in manner compatible with their calendars.

H. THE AMOUNT INVOLVED AND THE RESULTS OBTAINED REQUIRE A GREATLY DIMINISHED FEE AWARD THAN THEY SOUGHT.

As discussed above, there was a multi-million dollar prayer in this action. The fee-petitioners, however, only obtained thirty-three thousand dollars for their clients. This amount was little more than eight thousand dollars more than the last settlement offer made by Defendants (see affidavit of Jonathan Kotler filed herewith and incorporated herein by reference as though set forth verbatim herein). The fee-petitioners have relied heavily on the recent case of Keith v. Volpe, 86 F.R.D. 565 (C.D. Ca. 1980). This case involved a class action in a successful challenge to the Los Angeles Century Freeway project which resulted in the project's compliance with federal and state laws as well as affirmative action on housing programs. Counsel in Keith were able to negotiate a settlement to provide for minorities to be given certain preferential employment in the 20,000-man project that called for 4,200 units of low and moderate income housing with an estimated value of two hundred-fifty million dollars, thereby conferring "substantial tangible benefits, both pecuniary and non-pecuniary, on the State of California and its inhabitants." Keith, supra, at 572. The counsel in Keith negotiated a final consent decree which set forth "a complex, but innovative settlement that promises to benefit the entire Southern California community for many years to come." Keith, supra, at 568. Keith is not talking about benefits to eight individuals in the amount of $33,350.00. That fee-petitioners in the instant action should analogize their case to Keith seems at once pretentious, preposterous, and totally misleading.

I. THE EXPERIENCE, REPUTATION, AND ABILITY OF FEE-PETIONERS HAS NOT BEEN SHOWN TO BE OUTSTANDING

Unlike Keith where plaintiffs' counsel "provided first-rate legal service in successfully advocating the protection of the environmental and human interest at stake in this lawsuit involving 1.5 billion dollar freeway construction project," the counsel in the instant case had only just begun practice when they began representing these eight Plaintiffs. Gerald Lopez had only been out of law school for one year, and Roy Cazares for only two years. In May of 1975, according to the affidavit of Mr. Cazares attached to the instant motion, he and Mr. Lopez started in private practice together. This was only three months before they were retained by the Plaintiffs herein. Mr. Cazares's affidavit indicates that he has been involved with considerable litigation and civic activities over the past six years. (Apparently the instant case did not preclude Mr. Cazares in any way from other employement.) While it is not the intent of this Response to denegrate Mr. Cazares's civic involvement, such involvement does not in any way indicate a special expertise in the field of civil rights.

Mr. Lopez, on the other hand, has offered us no information whatsoever regarding his experience, reputation or ability. Moreover, Mr. Lopez refers to the "litigious nature of defendants" (see affidavit of Gerald P. Lopez, page 4, line 7). The Court's attention is drawn to this remark to point out that this is perhaps the first time it has ever been suggested that a defendant is litigious, as opposed to a plaintiff. As the Court is no doubt aware, Defendants in this suit did not seek this litigation, but Defense counsel would be doing disservice to their clients if they remained passive and acquiesced to fee-petitioners' demands without a whimper. That Defendants, and not Plaintiffs, prevailed on the overwhelming majority of Plaintiffs' original demands speaks more eloquently than anything else of the "litigious" nature of parties herein.

J. FEE-PETITIONERS HAVE FAILED TO DEMONSTRATE THAT THIS PARTICULAR CASE WAS "UNDESIRABLE".

Another of Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc.'s twelve factors is the undesirability of the case. Referring to the affidavit of Gerald P. Lopez submitted with the instant motion on page 2, line 25, Mr. Lopez submits to the Court the fact that he teaches courses devoted exclusively to civil rights legislation and teaches a civil rights litigation seminar. Based on this fact, the case at hand can hardly be said to be "undesirable" to Mr. Lopez. On the contrary, this is precisely the type of case which, to Mr. Lopez, should be the most desirable. Similarly, Roy Cazares also represents himself to have a "general practice with a strong emphasis on civil rights" (see affidavit of Roy B. Cazares attached to the instant motion, page 3, line 21). Unlike the pioneering attorneys who intially risked their practices to represent the indigent and the downtrodden, Messrs. Cazares and Lopez have in fact built their practice on representing plaintiffs in civil rights cases. As discussed earlier, Plaintiffs in this case were neither disenfranchised immigrant workers, nor prisoners without access to law libraries, nor students deprived of decent education, nor families denied adequate housing. Rather, these Plaintiffs were fully employed, middle-class home owners and residents in the City of Riverside. Fee-petitioners herein have made some attempt by innuendo to change the character of Plaintiffs herein as it suits their need. During the time of trial the Plaintiffs were characterized as middle-class, law-abiding property owners. Now, for the purposes of obtaining fee awards, the fee-petitioners have implied that Plaintiffs are the meek and downtrodden. The jury by limiting its verdict to $33,350.00 in a purportedly multi-million dollar case has indicated how it characterizes the Plaintiffs herein.

The Court is no doubt aware of the press coverage and publicity given to the instant action. Needless to say, such "free advertising" hardly makes this case undesirable, especially for attorneys who purportedly specialize in civil rights litigation. (See Los Angeles Times article dated November 16, 1980, previously referred to herein and attached hereto as Exhibit "A" and incorporated by reference as though set forth verabtim). In this article Mr.

Cazares was specifically identified by name and quoted about this case.

K. FEE-PETITIONERS HAVE FAILED TO GIVE ANY GUIDELINES TO THE COURT REGARDING THEIR PROFESSIONAL RELATIONSHIP WITH THEIR CLIENTS.

Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc. suggests that one other factor to consider in the award of attorneys fees is the nature of the professional relationship with the client. Fee-petitioners have offered absolutely no guideline whatsoever to the Court regarding the professional relationship they have with their clients. There has been no suggestion as to whether they have an on-going relationship, or whether they had not represented these clients before.

L. THE COURT MUST LOOK AT AWARDS IN SIMILAR CASES.

In looking to fee awards in other public interest cases, Keyes v. School Dist. No. 1, Denver, Colo., 439 F.Supp. 393, 413, (D. Colo. 1977), supplied a list of fees which had been awarded in civil rights litigation:

> "$5.00/hour—Spero v. Abbott Laboratories, 396 F. Supp. 321 (N.D. Ill. 1975)
> $12.00/hour—Brito v. Zia, 478 F.2d 1200 (10th Cir. 1973)
>
> $14.00/hour—Peltier v. City of Fargo, 533 F.2d 374 (8th Cir. 1976)
> $22.10/hour—Davis v. Board of School Commissioners, 526 F.2d 865 (5th Cir. 1976)

$20.00/hour for office work, $30.00/hour for court work—Wyatt v. Stickney, 344 F.Supp. 387 (M.D. Ala. 1972); Thompson v. School Board, 363 F.Supp. 458 (E.D. Va. 1973), aff'd, 498 F.2d 195 (4th Cir. 1974).

$20.00/hour for office work, $40.00/hour for court work—Latham v. Chandler, 406 F.Supp. 754 (N.D. Miss. 1976).

$30.00/hour average, $50.00/hour for appeal to United States Supreme Court—Norwood v. Harrison, 410 F.Supp. 133 (N.D. Miss. 1976).

$50.00/hour—Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 64 F.R.D. 680 (N.D. C.A. 1974); Wallace v. House, 377 F.Supp. 1192 (W.D. La. 1974).

$50.00 to $70.00/hour depending upon experience—Torres v. Sachs, 69 F.R.D. 343 (S.D. N.Y. 1975), aff'd. 538 F.2d 10 (2d Cir. 1976).

$64.80/hour—Swann v. Charlotte Mecklenburg Bd. of Education, 66 F.R.D. 483 (W.D.N. C. 1975).

$65.00/hour—Davis v. County of Los Angeles, 8 E.P.D. § 9444 (C.D. Cal. 1974).

FEE-PETITIONERS REQUEST FOR COMPENSATION IS DEFECTIVE IN FORM IN THAT HOURS AND RATES ARE NOT ITEMIZED.

The itemization of hours and specification of the rates submitted by Mr. Lopez was not done in his affidavit. According to Keown v. Storti, 456 F.Supp. 232 (E.D. Pa. 1978), such a defect must be remedied. When Mr. Lopez cures this defect however, Heigler v. Gatter, 463 F.Supp. 802 (E.D. Pa. 1978), requires that any figure that Mr. Lopez reconstructs is suspect and must be reduced approximately 20 percent because of his failure to keep contemporaneous time records.

ONLY SERVICES RENRERED FOR THIS PARTICULAR CASE SHOULD BE COMPENSABLE.

As this Honorable Court may be aware, there is currently pending a separate lawsuit filed by eighteen of the original Defendants, who were dismissed from the instant action, against Plaintiffs. (Albee v. Rivera C.A. No. 78-3319 D.C. No. 78-2076, United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.) That is a different case originally brought in the state court for malicious prosecution. Any fees counsel charged for defense of that proceeding which were included in the award presently sought, would be for fees not for services rendered in this case, and therefore, are not compensable by this motion. From the face of the affidavits of Mr. Lopez and Mr. Cazares, it is not apparent how much of the time spent by counsel was connected with the Albee case. According to Keown v. Storti, 456 F.Supp. 232 (E.D. Pa. 1978), time spent by counsel on this related Albee matter must be subtracted from the time requested in the instant motion.

ANY ATTORNEYS FEES AWARDED MUST BE PROPORTIONATE TO THE RECOVERY IN THE UNDERLYING SUIT.

Originally these eight Plaintiffs had presented six separate claims against 32 Defendants, for a total of 1,536 claims. The jury, however, provided recovery on only 37 of these 1,536 claims. Any fees awarded must take into account this disparity. In Scheriff v. Beck, 452 F.Supp. 1254 (D. Colo. 1978), a civil rights action, the court concluded that where plaintiff prevailed in his civil rights action against one defendant but did not prevail with respect to another defendant, the civil rights statute permitted fees to be awarded, but only as to sums reasonably expended against the defendant over whom plaintiff prevailed. In Scheriff, supra, at 1259, the court suggested:

> "Where, as here, plaintiff prevailed as to only one of the two defendants and has demonstrated no way in which to apportion his time, the court will simply cut the fee request by one-half."

The Scheriff court then looked to Plaintiff's success on his three separate claims and observed that he had recovered on only one. As a result, the court reasoned, "any recovery should take into account this disparity." Scheriff, supra, at 1259. The Scheriff court concluded at 1260 in this case however, that,

> "While we would normally apply the proportionate recovery rule, we need not do so here. In this case, in the exercise of our discretion, the court has decided to withhold any award of fees in favor of plaintiff. . . . It is recognized that in some cases, while a plaintiff may sustain his claim of civil rights violations, an attorney's fee award is simply not appropriate. Such a case was Sprogis v. United Airlines, Inc., 517 F.2d 387 (7th Cir. 1975). There plaintiff obstentiably brought suit against the airline for violation of Title VII, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et. seq., through the employers no marriage rule. The District Court had awarded plaintiff $10,408.00 and thereafter, plaintiff filed an application for $45,000.00 in attorney's fees. The court denied the application on a variety of grounds, including the fact that plaintiff was not the real party in interest (the real party having already reached a "class-action accord" with the, airline), that the precedential value of the suit was limited, that the suit was not of the type envisioned > by Congress in passing the underlying legislation, and that the claim for fees was not proportionate to the recovery." (emphasis added.)

The Scheriff court was outraged by the disparity between the fee request and the amount of recovery: plaintiff's fee and cost request was some 40 times the amount of his recovery. Based upon the facts in Scheriff the court denied the plaintiff's motion for an award of any fees and costs. In the within case, fee-petitioners are seeking an award nearly 16 times the amount of the jury award to the plaintiffs.

Similarly, the court in Keown v. Storti, 456 F.Supp. 232 (E.D. Pa. 1978), limited the amount of an attorneys fees award to plaintiff to the extent that he was successful in asserting his claims. Keown held further that for the purposes of fees act, defendants who successfully defend all claims asserted against them are "prevailing parties" and are therefore entitled to fees. Keown, supra, at 243.

In Keyes v. School Dist. No. 1, Denver, Colo., 439 F.Supp. 393 (D. Colo. 1977), plaintiffs and intervenors sought fees, costs, and expenses as prevailing parties. The court addressed this specific issue, and concluded that the award should be limited to the extent to which Plaintiffs and intervenors actually prevailed in litigation.

> "Some court have discounted requests for attorneys' fees by an amount comparable to the extent to which parties did not prevail. E.g. Schaeffer v. San Diego Yellow Cabs, Inc., 462 F.2d 1002, 1008 (9th Cir. 1972); Armstead v. Starkville Mun. Sep. School Dist., 395 F.Supp. 304, 312 (N.D. Miss. 1976); Chance v. Board of Examiners, 70 F.R.D. 334 (S.D. N.Y. 1976). While certain jurisdictions have rejected this position Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 64 F.R.D. 680 (N.D. Calif. 1974), the Tenth Circuit has adhered to the reduction rule. In Pearson v. Western Electric Co., 542 F.2d 1150, 1153, (10th Cir. 1976), the court stated: 'It is only when a party has prevailed in a court action that he may be entitled to attorney's fees proportionate to the extent of his recovery. Williams v. General Foods, Corp., 492 F.2d 399, 409 (7th Cir. 1974); Schaeffer v. San Diego Yellow Cabs, Inc., 462 F.2d 1002, 1008 (9th Cir. 1972).' (emphasis added). Thus, we are of the view that attorneys fees should be awarded to plaintiffs and intervenors but that awards should be limited to the extent to which they prevailed in this litigation."

In Keyes the court found that the intervenors and plaintiffs prevailed to an extent of 85% of the recovery requested by them, and accordingly, after determining an appropriate fee, the award to the intervenors and plaintiffs was reduced by 15%.

In cognizance of Chief Judge Seitz' admonition in Hughes v. Repko, 578 F.2d at 486 against the use of an automatic fractional reduction of the lodestar, Joseph S. Lord, Chief Judge nonetheless, had no choice but to decrease the award by the percentage plaintiff lost claims in Imprisoned Citizens Union v. Shapp, 473 F.Supp. 1017 (E.D. Pa. 1979), because fee petitioning counsel failed to give any guideline as to what portion of their time was spent on compensable, prevailing, issues.

USE OF A "MULTIPLIER" OR A "BONUS" IS NOT MERITED.

In Heigler v. Gatter, 463 F.Supp. 802 (E.D. Pa. 1978), the District Court held that plaintiffs counsel was entitled to a fee award of $5,725.00, computed at a rate of $50.00 per hour for non-trial time and $75.00 per hour for trial time, in addition to $523.40 for unreimbursed costs. This award was following successful civil rights litigation against two city police officers in which $11,566.00 was awarded to plaintiffs' Plaintiff, an individual, brought the action under 42 U.S.C. 1983 and alleged pendent state claims for false arrest and imprisonment, assault, battery, and malicious prosecution. The Heigler court found that "Plaintiff's counsel conducted the case in a competent manner worthy of someone with his skill and experience. These factors were adequately compensated in considering a reasonable hourly rate and there was not unusual performance justifying an increase in this case." Heigler, supra, at 805.

The court reached its decision upon the theory that "any addition to or subtraction from the lodestar to account for the quality of an attorney's work 'is designed to take account for an unusual degree of skill, be it unusually poor or unusually good.'" Baughman v. Wilson Freight Forwarding Company, 583 F.2d 1208, 1218 (3rd Cir. 1978) quoting Lindy Brothers Builders of Philadelphia v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 487 F.2d 161, 168 (3rd Cir. 1973); see Lindy Brothers Builders of Philadelphia v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 540 F.2d 102, 117 (3rd Cir. 1976) (Lindy II). Heigler continued,

> "the contingency factor does not justify an increase for several reasons. This case was neither factually nor legally complex. Lindy II supra, at 117. This lack of complexity manifested itself in a risk of relatively small number of hours being expended without compensation. Id. Finally, where 'the lode-> star as originally calculated by the district court [is] a significant amount in comparison to the amount awarded plaintiff in damages,' the court should be reluctant to increase the lodestar through the contingency factor. Baughman, supra, at 1218. In this case, the lodestar constitutes a substantial percentage of the recovery received by plaintiff. Therefore, we conclude that no further adjustment to the lodestar is warranted." Heigler, supra, at 805.

In another civil rights case, McPherson v. School Dist. No. 186, Springfield, Ill., 465 F.Supp. 749 (S.D. Ill. 1978), this court found that a multiplier of the hourly rate should not be used in that it was not permitted by the federal statute mandating an award to plaintiffs of attorneys fees and costs in civil rights litigation. See McPherson, supra, at 764.

Likewise, the court in Oliver v. Kalamazoo Board of Education, 576 F.2d 714 (6th Cir. 1978), construed 42 U.S.C. § 1988 in light of 20 U.S.C. § 1617 to only provide for recovery of a "reasonable attorney fee". The court in Oliver recognized that multipliers had been used in anti-trust cases, but found the use of such cases as analogous to civil rights cases with respect to the attorney's fee issue inapposite since there is usually a large monetary recovery in anti-trust cases. Oliver went on to say "attorneys fees awards should be high enough to attract competent counsel, yet not so high as to provide a windfall for them. Multiplying the number of hours properly spent times a reasonable hourly rate is sufficient to serve this goal." Oliver, supra, at 716.

The contingency nature of this action was not unusual enough to warrant an increase in lodestar. As stated in Imprisoned Citizens Union v. Shapp, 473 F.Supp. 1017, 1027 (E.D. Pa. 1979),

"Success here, albeit uncertain, was not so remote a likelihood that counsel deserves to be compensated simply for taking the case. For over a decade, litigation of this sort has not been a stranger in the federal courts and the contingencies involved in bringing this suit are, to a great extent, foreseeable, and not extraordinary."

CASES CITED BY FEE-PETITIONERS IN SUPPORT OF USE OF A MULTIPLIER ARE DISTINGUISHABLE.

Fee-petitioners, in their Memorandum of Points and Authorities in support of the instant motion, have contended that the use of a multiplier is appropriate in this case. To support their contention they have cited several cases which will be discussed individually at this point.

The first case presented by fee-petitioners is Lindy Brothers Builders, Inc., of Phila. v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 487 F.2d 161 (3rd Cir. 1973). Lindy is the leading anti-trust attorneys fees case. Unlike the instant action, Lindy was a class-action. It was the court's task, upon the petitioners' request, to determine the proper award of attorneys fees to be paid from the settlement of the class action according to the equitable fund doctrine in an attempt to have the benefited parties pay the fees. It was as a result of a settlement agreement entered into therein that a single fund was created to satisfy the claims of all of the plaintiffs as well as those who had not filed suit. Attorneys fees were to be paid from this single fund, thus, in Lindy, the defendants were paying for plaintiffs attorneys fees only indirectly as part of the total settlement. Defendants were not required to pay plaintiffs' attorneys fees in addition to the recovery by plaintiffs. The attorneys fees were merely a piece of the larger settlement pie. This is not at all like the case at hand where individual plaintiffs received individual specific awards by way of jury verdict, and now fee-petitioners request additional sums to be paid by Defendants as attorneys fees.

Similarly, in In Re Gypsum Cases, 386 F.Supp. 959 (N.D. Ca 1974), another anti-trust action, the court also applied the equitable fund doctrine: that is, it awarded attorneys fees out of a pre-determined settlement amount.

The third case raised by the fee-petitioners is Philadelphia v. Charles Pfizer & Co. Inc., 345 F.Supp. 454 (S.D. N.Y. 1972). This case is another example of an anti-trust class action creating a settlement fund from which attorneys fees were awarded, and is also one in which there was a prior agreement between counsel regarding the award of fees.

The next case cited by fee-petitioners is Arenson v. Board of Trade of City of Chicago, 373 F.Supp. 1349 (N.D. Ill. 1974) in which fee-petitioners claim a multiplier of four was awarded. Unfortunately, Arenson was miscited, and defense counsel have been unable to locate it at this point in time. Perhaps the fee-petitioners might supply defense counsel with a corrected citation or a copy of this case, so that they might be able to determine whether Arenson is another anti-trust class action equitable fund doctrine case.

Finally, fee-petitioners refer to an unpublished opinion in Goldstein v. Alodex Corp., Civ. No. TI-1857 (E.D. Pa. December 7, 1973), in which they claim a multiplier of five was awarded. This case is likewise unavailable to defense counsel—as Plaintiffs attorneys must be well aware.

And, again, fee-petitioners refer us to Keith v. Volpe, 86 F.R.D. 565 (C.D. Ca. 1980), to support the use of a multiplier, albeit even this case has applied the common fund, common benefit doctrine and has instructed at 571:

> "The Supreme Court limited this doctrine in Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. v. Wilderness Society, 421 U.S. 240 (1975), to those cases where the members of the benefited class are sufficiently identifiable and the tangible benefits sufficiently ascertainable so that fee shifting would 'with some exactitude' shift the costs of litigation to those benefiting from the suit. Id. at 265 N.39. See also U.S. v. Imperial Irrigation District, 595 F.2d 525, 529 (9th Cir. 1979); Reiser v. Del Monte Properties Co., 605 F.2d 1135, 1139 (9th Cir. 1979)."

The common benefit doctrine requires that an action must confer substantial benefit on others (i.e. shareholders), person benefited must comprise an ascertainable class, and the award of attorney fees must operate to shirt the cost of litigation to such a group. Reiser v. Del Monte Properties Co., 605 F.2d 1135 (9th Cir. 1979). Here there has been no showing that an ascertainable class of persons benefited from the award of $33,350.00 to the eight plaintiffs; nor has there been showing that all the citizen-taxpayers of the City of Riverside gained from this suit. It is in reality those taxpayers who would be asked to pay the cost of this suit by increased insurance premiums on the municipal coverage.

U.S. v. Imperial Irrigation Dist., 595 F.2d 525 (9th Cir. 1979), examined the "substantial benefits" doctrine and observed:

"justification for this exception [to the traditional rule disfavoring awards shifting legal fees] is that identifiable persons who benefit substantially from the action of the party seeking fees should share the costs. 'To allow the others to obtain full benefit from the plaintiff's efforts without contributing equally to the litigation expenses would be to enrich the others unjustly at the plaintiff's expense.' Mills, 396 U.S. at 392, 90 S.Ct. at 625. See also Hall v. Cole, 412 U.S. 1, 5-6, 93 S.Ct. 1943, 36 L.Ed.2d 702 (1973). However, because the beneficiaries frequently are not parties or members of a certified class before the court, this exception is subject to an important limitation that bars an award in this case. The limitation is that there must be before the court a party against whom the court can assess fees who stands in such a relationship to the benefited class that the award will 'operate to spread the costs proportionately' and 'with some exactitude' among the identifiable beneficiaries of the fee-seeker's success. Mills, 396 U.S. at 394, 90 S.Ct. at 626; Alyeska, 421 U.S. at 265 n.39, 95 S.Ct. 1612. Only when this is true will attorney's fees be effectively spread among those who stand to gain from the litigation without contributing to it, rather than simply being shifted to the loser. (As the Mills court put it: '[t]o award attorney's fees in such a suit to a [successful] plaintiff . . . . is not to saddle the unsuccessful party with the expenses but to impose them on the class that would have had to pay them had it brought the suit.' Mills v. Electric Auto-Lite Co., 396 U.S. 375, 396-97, 90 S.Ct. 616, 628, 24 L.Ed.2d 593 (1970). See also Hall v. Cole, 412 U.S. 1, 6, 93 S.Ct. 1943, 36 L.Ed.2d 102 (1973).)

The two leading Supreme Court cases are illustrative. In Mills, a shareholder prevailed in an action to set aside the merger of his corporation into another because in recommending approval of the merger the directors of his corporation had failed to disclose that they were controlled by the acquiring company. The Court shifted the shareholder's attorney's fees to the > corporation because the suit conferred a substantial benefit on all shareholders and the corporation itself, and because '[T]he court's jurisdiction over the corporation as the nominal defendant ma[kes] it possible to assess fees again all of the shareholders through an award against the corporation.'' 396 U.S. at 395, 90 S. Ct. at 627. All shareholders benefited from vindication of the securities fraud rules and, by requiring the payment of the counsel fees from the corporate treasury, all would be taxed their proportionate share of the costs through lowered dividends. The reasoning in Hall v. Cole is similar: the plaintiff-union member vindicated the rights of free speech in union affairs and thus 'rendered a substantial service to his union as an institution and to all of its members' (412 U.S. at 8, 93 S.Ct. at 1948); shifting plaintiff's counsel fees to the union would effectively charge all of the members with the cost of achieving the common benefit by taking a share of each member's dues.

> Ready identifiability is required to insure clear, concrete evidence that the fee-seeker's efforts produced actual benefits to others, and that fees are assessed only against beneficiaries—those who would by unjustly enriched by not sharing in the cost of producing the benefit—and not against persons whose positions are not substantially bettered because of the victorious lawsuit.

Thus it is apparent that the substantial benefits doctrine is inapplicable in this case because Plaintiffs have totally failed to show that anyone other than they themselves will benefit from this suit.

The Court's attention is directed to the fact that there simply was no common fund, equitable fund, or any other fund created in this case. The jury awarded each individual Plaintiff funds in specified amounts for specified damages.

DOWNWARD ADJUSTMENT OF THE OBJECTIVE VALUE OF COUNSEL'S SERVICES IS REQUIRED WHERE ONLY A FEW CITIZENS HAVE BENEFITED AND NO WIDESPREAD OR PERVASIVE VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL RIGHTS HAVE OCCURRED.

Once again, the Court's attention is directed to Keown v. Storti, 456 F.Supp. 232, 242 (E.D. Pa. 1978). The court in Keown on its own initiative, adjusted the objective value of counsel's services downward:

> "This case vindicated the rights of only one person—Robert Keown. It was not a class action. It did not produce any new law that, through stare decisis, will greatly benefit others. The violation that was remedied was not widespread or pervasive; indeed, the jury found that Defendant Storti acted unlawfully only with respect to Robert Keown and not as to his wife. Although redress of any civil rights violation advances the public interest, the advancement in this case was minimal. The $2,500.00 damage award, which, in my view, was far in excess of proven compensatory damages, provided the Plaintiff more than full compensation for his injury." (emphasis added)

Thus, as in Keown, Plaintiffs in the instant action have been compensated for all injury. This is particularly so when, as here, Plaintiffs counsel offered at trial evidence of less than $300.00 in damages.

BONUSES ARE NOT AVAILABLE UNDER 42 U.S.C. § 1988.

> "Since the purpose of Title 42, U.S.C.A. § 1988, is to assure private civil rights litigants of representation rather than to provide windfalls to attorneys, the Court is convinced that the request for bonuses is due to be denied. Preston v. Mandeville, 451 F. Supp. 617, 623, , (S.D. Ala. 1978)."

In Preston, the court not only addressed the issue of bonuses but also analyzed whether or not such a civil rights case was "undesirable" in relationship to counsel's request for a bonus:

> "The Johnson [Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., 488 F.2d 714 (5th Cir. 1974)] court was concerned about the economic impact that the acceptance of a civil rights suit might have on an attorney's law practice. Counsel for the plaintiffs assert that the 'undesirability' of this particular case and civil rights cases in general 'is evidenced by relatively few members of the Mobile Bar who have chosen to represent plaintiffs in cases of this nature.' This is not within the scope of 'undesirability' as envisioned by the Johnson opinion. The Court has already noted that Hicks and Mandell [counsel in the Preston case] do a great deal of civil rights work, and that Brown's law firm is similarly engaged. Under these circumstances the Court is convinced that no malevolent economic effect will be felt by these attorneys; indeed the experience and reputation gained from such proceedings will no doubt aid each in their future practice." Preston, supra, at 622.

THERE IS NO STATUTORY RIGHT TO PAYMENT OF OUT-OF-POCKET EXPENSES.

Overhead is not a compensable cost. Postage, clerical and typing services, reproduction, mailing, long-distance telephone calls, secretarial overtime and transcript have all been considered by the courts to be regular office overhead and not a compensable cost. Keith v. Volpe, 86 F.R.D. 565 (C.D. Ca. 1980); Cole v. Tuttle, 462 F.Supp. 1016 (N.D. Miss. 1978).

Similarly, travel expenses and long-distance phone call expenses incurred by Mr. Cazares in this case should be reduced as it was done in McPherson v. School Dist. No. 186, Springfield, Illinois, supra, at 763, with regard to the selection and use of out-of-town counsel. Courts have been mixed in their determination of whether law clerks and paralegals should be included in an award of attorneys fees. Both Oliver v. Kalamazoo Board of Education, 576 F.2d 714 (6th Cir. 1978) and Scheriff v. Beck, 452 F.Supp. 1254 (D. Colo. 1978) have held that paralegal and law clerk services are merely part of attorney's overhead and should not be considered in an award of attorney's fees.

FEE-PETITIONERS ARE NOT ENTITLED TO AN INTERIM AWARD OF FEES

Fee-petitioners in their memo of points and authorities attached to the instant motion have contended that they are entitled to an interim award of fees. Defense counsel herein have difficulty comprehending the nature of fee-petitioners request, as well as the applicability of cases cited by fee-petitioners to support their contention. Schaeffer v. San Diego Yellow Cabs, Inc., 462 F.2d 1002 (9th Cir. 1972) totally fails to address the issue of interim fees. Likewise, Davis v. County of Los Angeles, 8 E.P.D. § 9444 (C.D. Ca. 1974), also totally fails to address the issue of an interim award of fees. In Malone v. North American Rockwell Corp., 457 F.2d 779 (9th Cir. 1972), the court awarded $2,500.00 in attorneys fees for services on the appeal " that amount having been stipulated to as reasonable by North American's counsel." Malone, supra, at 781. This, too was not an "interim" award.

We agree with fee-petitioners that an award of attorneys fees can be an integral part of the relief sought in a civil rights action and therefore the judgment is not final and appealable until they have been set by the Court, after proper request for same.

However, are Plaintiffs' counsel implying by the request for an award of attorneys fees in the instant case, that they should be paid whatever sum they have request at this point, regardless of whether the Defendants should choose to appeal such an award? Where is the statutory or case law authority for such a request? It is not reasonable to conclude that such an award of interim fees is implanted in the Civil Rights Act.

THE ECONOMIC IMPACT OF FEE AWARDS MUST BE EXAMINED BY THE COURT.

Recent cases have suggested that the Court must be cognizant of the economic impact of monetary awards where the financial risk, or burden, is shifted from one party to another. Such a shift must result in the greater good, i.e. lower cost, redressed wrong, to benefit the larger group of persons. Here, as in Oliver v. Kalamazoo, supra, at 718, there is being created a tax-payers' burden, for it is the Riverside taxpayer who is being asked to pay Mr. Cazares and Mr. Lopez. This is because, although the City is covered by insurance, the insurance premiums are paid by tax dollars. Just as automobile insurance rates increase with sizeable claims and recoveries, so do insurance rates for municipalities. The cost to the tax-payers who have been requested by fee-petitioners to pay their fees must be weighed as compared to the benefit to the eight individual Plaintiffs in the instant action and, of course, their two attorneys.

As in Keyes v. School Dist. No. 1, Denver, Colo., supra, at 415, it must be remembered that the public must bear the financial burden and that "attorney fee entitlement cannot jeopardize the financial realities of the agency paying the fee;" in this case, the City of Riverside. It was found in McPherson v. School Dist. No. 186, Springfield, Ill., supra, at 757, that "Defendant is a public body and a fee award is essentially reallocating a portion of the property tax area residents pay [from one civic benefit to another]. . . . It is incumbent [on the court] to scrutinize Plaintiffs' fee request to assure the public is not overcharged."

Latinos, Police Both Claim Victories
Lawmen Hope Barrio Controversy Ends

By LORRAINE BENNETT, Times Riverside-San Bernardino Bureau

On the night of Aug. 1, 1975, as Riverside sweltered in sticky summer heat, Jennie and Santos Rivera prepared a bachelor party for their nephew.

Guests began to arrive and gathered in the Riveras' open garage, where they sat drinking and talking.

From time to time, a black and white unit from the Riverside Police Department cruised by, patrolling the loose confines of Casa Blanca, Riverside's explosive Latino barrio, where the password is violence.

Accounts vary now, five years later, about who started what. But the clash between the Riveras' guests and Riverside police that August night resulted in 51 arrests — the largest number ever jailed from a single incident in Riverside history.

At least two Latinos suffered injuries, and one police officer was hurt so seriously he was forced to retire from the force.

In the wake of the arrests came two trials. The first was a criminal case in which three of the party guests were convicted and received sentences ranging from probation to fines and 30 days in jail.

The second trial, stemming from a lawsuit filed against the City of Riverside and its police department, ended Oct. 7 when a federal jury in Los Angeles awarded a total of $33,850, plus lawyers' fees, to eight Latinos and found the police guilty of violating their civil rights.

Attorneys for the Latinos plan to seek an increase in the amount of damages when they return to court Dec. 15.

In spite of what they consider to be small awards, they view the decision as a significant civil-rights victory because it marks the first time such convictions have been returned against Riverside police.

To police, however, the amount of damages is a message from the jury that the officers acted with some justification. They hope the jury's decision will bring an end to five years of controversy between authorities and residents of the barrio.

Unlikely That Hard Feelings Will End

It appears unlikely, however, that hard feelings among the Casa Blanca Latinos will end now. This is a small ethnic pocket originally carved from citrus groves by Mexican farm workers. It lies south of Interstate 91, a square-mile community far removed in concept from the rest of Riverside.

With its ethnic graffiti and spectacular sidewalk murals, Casa Blanca carefully guards its identity against encroaching industrial development and tract housing.

The barrio has gained national notoriety as an infamous battleground where two warring Latino families have engaged in a blood feud that began 16 years ago between drinking partners in a local bar.

The feud has ascalated since the mid-1970s. Eight members of the two feuding families, the Ahumadas and Lozanos, have been gunned down during such simple activities as sitting on a front porch or strolling down the street.

Tension already was thick in Casa Blanca on Aug. 1, 1975, when Jennie Rivera and her husband Santos prepared to open their comfortable, well-groomed home for an evening in honor of nephew Lee Roy Rivera's upcoming wedding.

Mrs. Rivera does not, to this day, consider her home a part of Casa Blanca. But boundaries blur in neighborhood communities. Although the barrio proper lies half a mile away in Jennie Rivera's mind, to Riverside police, her house is still within Casa Blanca's "phere of influence," and when any crowd gathers there, police take notice.

As a matter of course, officers already were patrolling the Riveras' neighborhood in strengthened numbers that night. An Anglo family had argued with a Latino family. In the exchange of insults, the two groups had been seen sitting in their front yards with rifles across their laps. Police patrols had increased.

So as the Friday night party crowd gathered at the Rivera house, police patrols were already cruising the neighborhood and the crowd took notice.

Time and emotion have distorted the sequence of events of that evening. Police claim the first incident involved a minor carrying a cup of beer. They say he came from the Rivera house.

Police say they did not pursue that violation, but when they received a prowler report and saw two other youths scurry away, and when a pickup truck rolled down the street with its lights blinking and the driver displaying open containers of alcoholic beverages, the police decided to investigate.

During the interrogation, police say, a group of Latinos from the Rivera party interferred, a scuffle broke out and the group began throwing dirt clods, rocks and bottles at officers.

Police called for reinforcements. Additional units and a police helicopter arrived, and the party goers retreated into the Rivera house.

An order to disperse, given over the helicopter loudspeaker was ignored, police say, and they were forced to use tear gas to flush the crowd from the house.

The Latinos claim they never heard such an order, that police first told them to go inside, then tear gassed them out.

Jennie Rivera has a vivid recollection of stumbling, blinded by tear gas, through her front door and coming face to face with lines of uniformed officers, one line kneeling in front of the other.

They were pointing rifles at the house, she says. Police, however, say no rifles were in use that night, and that regulation shotguns remained in police vehicles. What Mrs. Rivera saw may have been batons in the hands of officers, police say.

One of the Latinos, Jerome Rivera, a brother of the guest of honor, was hit over the head in a scuffle with police. Witnesses say another party goer, Manuel Flores, Jr., was struck so hard an officer felt for his pulse.

Police contend Jerome Rivera assaulted an officer with a belt he had wrapped around his hand. They say Flores threw a large dirt clod at officers.

Mrs. Rivera is certain that what she saw was rifles. She contends the people attending her party were herded together like cattle, handcuffed and carted off to the police station although, she says, they had done nothing wrong.

Charges against most of those arrested were dropped shortly afterward. In early 1976, a Riverside jury convicted two men and a woman on charges that included battery against a police officer and resisting arrest. Their sentences ranged from probation to fines of $190 and 30 days in jail.

The jury failed to return a verdict on three more Latinos accused by police. The district attorney's office requested dismissal of charges against two others.

In June, 1976, eight Latinos filed suit against the City of Riverside, the police chief and 31 officers for violating their civil rights, false arrest and imprisonment, malicious prosecution and negligence. They sued for $9.75 million and requested a jury trial.

Eight Settled for $16,000

The civil suit also accused the police of conspiring to cover up the events of Aug. 1 by filing false reports.

Other issues in the case included whether the Latinos had heard and understood the order to disperse, whether police actually witnessed persons committing arrestable offenses and whether officers used undue force in making the arrests.

When the federal jury in Los Angeles finally handed down its decision, it found the police department and four officers guilty of violating the civil rights of eight Latinos during the disturbance.

It found no evidence that police conspired to cover up what had actually occurred by filing inaccurate reports.

"We're just glad it's over," said Deputy Police Chief L. L. (Sonny) Richardson, a sargeant (sic) on the police force in 1975 and one of the defendants in the case.

"As long as that lawsuit was hanging, it had a chilling effect on (police) relations with the Casa Blanca community."

Richardson feels what happened five years ago was "another time and place." Changes have been made, including the installation of a new police chief and better training for officers in dealing with barrio disturbances, he said.

Richardson is one of those who believe the jury sent the police department a message by awarding what has been considered a low sum to the Latinos.

'Compassion For The Plaintiffs'

"I think they felt the police acted with cause," Richardson said. "I don't think the jury set out to punish the police department, but I think they felt some compassion for the plaintiffs, too, that they were deserving of some award."

Although Jennie Rivera sees the award as "a big step for us and for the Mexican community" and a vindication of "standing up for our rights," Jerome Rivera, who received more than $6,000 for civil rights abuses, false arrest and negligence, was not satisfied.

Now when a problem develops in his neighborhood, Rivera says, he will not bother to call the Riverside police for help.

"Whoever they send might be one of them (the convicted officers). By fighting for my rights I'm going to have to give up a few."

And so the hard feelings continue to smolder. U.S. District Court Judge Mariana Pfaelzer said the jurors made no comment on the low monetary award when they returned 37 verdicts against Riverside police.

The judge did say, however, that if Riverside police are construing the sum to mean they had done nothing wrong, they are in error.

"If the jury found for the plaintiffs, they (Riverside police) certainly did something wrong," the judge said. "But actually, it is improper for me to answer that kind of question."

Renee Wong of Los Angeles, who served as jury forman, said the jury had no idea the Latinos had sued for such a large sum in damages.

Roy Cazares, attorney for the plaintiffs, said he elected not to raise the issue of $9.75 million in damages during the actual testimony because "I didn't think we had proved that amount in damages."

"We wanted the Riveras to get something for putting up with the case for five years. But we didn't see any strong evidence to tell us to give them a whole lot of money, either," Wong said.

'We Thought They Were Wrong'

At the same time, the jury wanted the Riverside police to know "we thought they were wrong, to slap their wrists, so to speak," she said.

The jury reached the point where members asked the judge for guidelines in awarding damages in the civil liberties suit, "but she sent back word to use our own good judgment," Wong said.

Deloris Lukens of Hemet, a member of the jury, said jurors did not have enough proof for an airtight case against police.

Juries traditionally make low awards in civil rights cases because they see the money as coming directly from taxpayers' pockets, Cazares said.

"Riverside police have a siege mentality when it comes to Casa Blanca," Cazares commented. "When you have that kind of fear, you will react to reinforce your stereotypes.

"That kind of thought process by rank-and-file police officers proceeds from the top down."

But no one will ever convince Deputy Chief Richardson that he or his officers overreacted in Casa Blanca that night.

Just two weeks after the events of Aug. 1, three officers and four civilians were injured in a violent outburst in the barrio. One officer's eye was shot out and he was permanently retired from the force, Richardson said.

Of the Aug. 1 clash, Richardson concluded, "I felt we used the amount of force appropriate for the offenses under which the arrests were taking place.

"In this case, I believe everybody thinks they are telling the truth. I think the Riveras are honest in how they saw the events of Aug. 1. I also feel the police department is as honest.

"What we are talking about here are perceptual differences. They saw us as an undisciplined, unruly mob. We saw them the same way."

The Faculty

Benjamin Aaron has completed a chapter for the labor law volumne of the International Encyclopedia of Comparative Law on settlement of labor disputes over rights. He also addressed the Administrative Law Judges Conference on "The Union's Duty of Fair Representation" in February. Professor Aaron is vice chairman and chairman-elect of the statewide Academic Senate and is editor-in-chief of the quarterly journal, Comparative Labor Law.

Norman Abrams authored a study, "Administrative process Alternatives to the Criminal Process," which was published by the National Center for Administrative Justice. His brief paper, "Some Observations on Basic Research on Administrative Procedure and the Idea of a Procedural Continuum" was published in an Administra-Law Review symposium.

At a conference on white collar crime at Temple University, he gave a paper on "White Collar Crime and the Federal Role in Law Enforcement," which will be published in the Temple Law Review. He also presented a paper on "The Liability of Corporate Officers for the Strict Liability Offenses of their Corporation—A Comment on Dotterweich and Park" at the Corporate Law Institute in New York.

Professor Abrams. who is teaching a new course on "Federal Criminal Law Enforcement" in which he is using his own casebook materials, is on the steering committee of UCLA's Center for International and Strategic Affairs. This spring he is the center's acting co-director.

Reginald Alleyne recently published an article in Hastings Law Journal on the new collective bargaining law for California universities and colleges. Along with Joseph Grodin and Donald Wollett, Professor Alleyne edited a casebook on public sector collective bargaining published by the Bureau of National Affairs.

He addressed a conference of California Administrative Law Judges on arbitration and unfair labor practice remedies and was a seminar leader at a California School Employees Association conference on administrative practices before the California Public Employment Relations Board.

Michael R. Asimow has completed a study for the Administrative Conference of the United States on the separtaion (sic) of functions in federal administrative agencies.

He plans to study the functioning of English administrative agencies during his spring semester sabbatical.

John A. Bauman has been appointed executive director of American Law Schools, and will be on a two-year leave from the University to take up his duties in Washington, D.C.

Helen Bendix has completed work on Supreme Court Practice and Jurisdiction (with Moore and Ringle) to be published by Matthew Bender Company.

Paul Bergman is a faculty member for the 1980 AALS Clinical Teachers Conference to be held in Montana this June. He has supervised the drafting of new problems for the 1980 experimental portion of the California bar exam to test the practical skills of the examinees. Bergman is also writing an article with the relationship between class action class representatives and attorneys for the class.

David Binder has developed an estate planning curriculum for the American Bar Association's pilot program on law office skills. He was an instructor on that subject for ABA pilot projects in Berkeley and Chicago.

Professor Binder also has published an Instructor's Manual on Legal Interviewing and Counseling.

Grace Blumberg has completed an article, "Adult Derivative Benefits in Social Security," to be published by the Stanford Law Review. She is currently writing on several aspects of unmarried cohabitation.

Professor Blumberg is serving on the advisory board and litigation subcommittee of the "ERA Impact Project" undertaken by the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund and the Women's Law Project.

Richard Delgado delivered papers at New York University Law School and the New School for Social Research, and testified before two legislative committees on issues relating to religious movements and the law. His article, "Active Rationality in Judicial Review" appears as the lead article in the Minnesota Law Review.

The New York Review of Law & Social Action will publish a second article, "Religious Totalism as Slavery" and he has co-authored an article on medical malpractice with second-year law student Joan Vogel. Professor Delgado is now working on an article, "The Moralist As Expert Witness."

George P. Fletcher prepared a 500-page volume of case histories and legal analysis for the UCLA-hosted conference on "Soviet Jews Under Soviet Law," which is now available in law libraries around the country. He spent two weeks in the Soviet Union working on the Shcharansky case and later returned to Moscow on an academic exchange to present a paper on the "Presumption of Innocence in Soviet and America Law" at the Soviet Institute of State and Law. The institute's journal will publish a Russian translation of the paper.

Professor Fletcher also presented a paper on German approaches to the "taking" problem at the USC Conference on Comparative Constitutional Law. He will teach courses on criminal law and legal philosophy as a visiting professor at the University of Frankfurt this spring.

Carole Goldberg-Ambrose is serving as principal investigator of a University grant to produce a series of films on Indian Law.

She recently delivered a report on "Energy Mobilization and the Balance of Federal, State and Tribal Power", and plans to turn that research into several articles.

Donald G. Hagman will teach "Public Control of Land" at the University of Michigan this summer, hoping to use the recently completed second edition of his casebook on that subject.

The southern section of the American Planning Association recently honored Professor Hagman for his outstanding contributions to planning in this area.

William A. Klein has published Business Organization and Finance: Legal and Economic Principles with Foundation Press this year.

He is also participating in a new course called "Motion Picture Business Transactions," along with instructors Gary O. Concoff and David R. Ginsburg, both of Kaplan, Livingston, Goodwin, Berkowitz & Selvin.

Wesley J. Liebeler recently published a review of Bork's The Antitrust Paradox and has completed a manuscript the antitrust activities of the FTC to published (sic) by Oxford University Press. He gave papers at the Western Economic Association, the American Economic Association, the Southwestern University Antitrust Symposium, and an antitrust symposium sponsored by the Law and Economics Center.

Professor Liebeler is working on a paper on the implications of the GTE Sylvania case and a review of current antitrust problems for the Hoover Institute. He is also preparting an article on Friedman vs. Rogers (Texas) for the Law and Economics Center as well as a paper on the 1901 U.S. Steel merger for the Law and Economics Program at the University of Chicago.

Gerald Lopez is nearing completion of his article, "Undocumented Mexican Migration: In Search of a Just Immigration Law," and is researching the development of law surrounding Section 1983.

Professor Lopez was invited to deliver a lecture on "Civil Rights Litigation" at California's first Minority State Bar Convention. He has also been invited to testify before President Carter's Select Commission on Immigration and Refuge Policy.

Daniel Lowenstein is a member of the national governing board of Common Cause, and an active member of the campaign advisory committee of Californians for Smoking and No-Smoking Sections.

Michael D. Rappaport delivered a paper comparing minority and white placement patterns in the legal profession before the National Conference of . . .

AFFIDAVIT OF JONATHAN KOTLER

State of California, County of Los Angeles, ss.

I, JONATHAN KOTLER, being first duly sworn, depose and say:

1. I am an attorney at law in good standing with the State Bar of California duly licensed to practice in all of the courts of the State of California, and am attorney for the Defendants herein and by virtue of the foregoing, I have personal knowledge of and am competent to testify to and if called to testify would so testify to the following:

2. I have read both the Affidavit of Gerald P. Lopez and that of Roy B. Cazares re: request for attorneys fees, and since the legal arguments in opposition to their motion are contained in the Memorandum of Points and Authorities filed concurrently herewith, I will confine this affidavit to the subject matter of their affidavits.

3. Directing this Honorable Court's attention to paragraph 7 at page 4 of Mr. Lopez' affidavit, wherein Mr. Lopez refers in two separate places to the "litigious nature of defendants", your Affiant finds it hard to understand how defendants can ever be litigious. If, as Mr. Lopez seems to indicate, he is referring to objections to discovery and witnesses, then your Affiant is content to rest on the record of this case wherein Mr. Lopez and his clients were precluded by court order from discovery which your Affiant, as attorney for Defendants herein objected to, and they eventually withdrew a myriad of exhibits and witnesses to which, likewise, your Affiant objected. Apparently. Mr. Lopez is taking the position that your Affiant has been litigious for doing those very things, which, if your Affiant hadn't done, your Affiant could be sued for malpractice by his very own clients.

4. In the same paragraph, Mr. Lopez states:

> "Finally, and perhaps the best evidence of the litigious nature of defendants, the number of hours expended is great because defendants never once made a reasonable settlement offer."

5. To that dubious charge, your Affiant states that he is unaware of rule of law which would require him to respond to unreasonable settlement offers, the last one of which was for an amount nearly ten times the award eventually made by the jury herein. Further, what Mr. Lopez does not state (and perhaps, because he has not checked with Mr. Cazares) is that the last settlement offer made by your Affiant to the Plaintiffs herein, through Mr. Cazares, was for the sum of $25,000.00. This amount was only eight thousand dollars away from the amount the jury eventually awarded, but it was rejected by Mr. Cazares who, apparently, anticipating a very large jury award herein, told your Affiant that he would be seeking attorneys fees in the sum of $70,000.00 for Mr. Lopez and himself.

6. The aforesaid offer of $25,000.00 was made prior to the jury coming back with its award herein, and while they were deliberating. Subsequent to the jury's findings herein, the attorneys for the Plaintiffs herein immediately forgot not only that the settlement offer was made, but have increased their demand for attorneys fees more than six-fold, although no other services were rendered by them (according to their own affidavits) between the time this offer was made and their demand for attorneys fees herein was filed, other than asking for fees for themselves.

7. As to the affidavit of Mr. Roy B. Cazares filed in an effort to get from this Honorable Court what the jury refused to give his clients, attention is drawn to paragraph 2 of said affidavit wherein Mr. Cazares apparently is under the belief that "counsel for defendants knew or should have known that expenses alone totaled nearly $7,000.00" and on that basis should have increased the settlement offer made by your Affiant's clients.

8. What your Affiant cannot understand and cannot reconcile, is how your Affiant should have known that Mr. Cazares' expenses "alone totaled nearly $7,000.00" when his very own affidavit filed in conjunction with his request for attorneys fees (Exhibit "C" to the Motion) shows expenses of $4,038.51. Is this three thousand dollar difference merely an oversight on Mr. Cazares' part? Put another way, how can Mr. Cazares really expect that your Affiant "knew or should have known that expenses alone totaled nearly $7,000.00" when his own belief and evidence is to the contrary?

9. And finally, as stated in your Affiant's own Motion for Attorneys Fees filed previously in this matter, and to also be heard on January 19, 1981, your Affiant, who has a great deal more litigation experience than either of the opposing counsel in this matter, having been a trial lawyer, and having been involved in federal court litigation since 1971 (or nearly twice as long as either Mr. Lopez or Mr. Cazares) has throughout this entire action charged his clients the sum of $50.00 per hour. The results herein show that at the sum of $50.00 per hour your Affiant obtained approximately 10 times as many judgments for his clients as counsel for the Plaintiffs herein did for theirs, and yet they are seeking attorneys fees based on an hourly rate of up to $300.00 per hour.

10. Executed at Beverly Hills, California, this 5th day of January, 1981.

AFFIDAVIT OF ROBERT L. WINSLOW IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR REASONABLE ATTORNEYS FEES AND COSTS

ROBERT L. WINSLOW, first being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. I am a partner and the co-chairman of the litigation department in the law firm of Irell & Manella. I am a 1949 graduate of Stanford Law School where I served on the Board of Editors of the Stanford Law Review. I was admitted to the California Bar in June 1949 and immediately began practice as a Deputy District Attorney in Mendocino County, California. In March of 1950, I left the District Attorney's office to become an individual and sole practitioner in Mendocino County. I operated my own law office until April 1961 when I was appointed to the Superior Court in Mendocino County. I served as a Superior Court Judge until January of 1969 when I joined the firm of Mitchell, Silberberg & Knupp in Los Angeles. I remained with that firm until September of 1972 when I joined the firm of Irell & Manella.

2. During the first ten years of my practice, I was a general practitioner operating a typical small office general practice, including of course a wide range of litigation. During the next eight years of my professional life, I had the enriching experience of serving as a Superior Court Judge where, as a trial judge, I presided over a wide variety of trials, including commercial, domestic, criminal, personal injury and eminent domain trials. I tried several homicide cases as well as cases of minor significance. I also served on the faculty of a number of Judicial Council sponsored institutes and the faculty of the California College of Trial Judges. While at Michell, Silberberg & Knupp and in my current position at Irell & Manella I have been involved primarily in complex commercial litigation.

3. Recently, in a major consumer class action where I was chief counsel representing the plaineiff class, Garrett v. Coast Federal Savings and Loan Association, Los Angeles Superior Court No. C995634, I was involved in preparing and representing to the Court an application for attorneys' fees in that action for the successful plaintiffs' counsel. In connection with that action, and generally as a partner in a large commercial law firm. I have become familiar with the general criteria for fixing attorneys' fees and with the range of attorneys' billing rates charged by attorneys in Los Angeles County. Those billing rates range from $50 an hour to $250, depending upon the age, skill and experience of the particular attorney.

4. I have been informed that Gerald P. Lopez was graduated from Harvard Law School approximately seven years ago, that for over five years he has specialized in civil rights litigation, that he teaches a course on civil rights legislation (focusing on §1983) at the School of Law at the University of California at Los Angeles, and that he researches and writes in the field of civil rights. It is my opinion that $125 per hour is a reasonable hourly billing rate for a person of Mr. Lopez' background and experience.

5. I have been ingormed that Roy B. Cazares was graduated from Harvard Law School over seven years ago, that for seven years he has specialized in litigation, with the last five years devoted primarily to civil rights litigation, and that he has lectured on civil rights, constitutional law and police-community relations. It is my opinion that $125 per hour is a reasonable hourly billing rate for a person of Mr. Cazares' background and experience.

6. By hourly billing rate I have been referring to the billing rates at which time is recorded by a law firm as work is being performed on a matter. This hourly billing rate only provides a guideline for a determination of a proper fee in a given matter. The reasonableness of a fee also depends upon the complexity of the issues involved in the matter, the experience in the particular field of the attorneys involved, the result achieved, the risk of an unfavorable result, whether the case was taken on a contingency basis and the vigor with which the case was litigated by both sides. These factors, in an appropriate case, might support a reasonable attorneys' fee significantly in excess of the reasonable hourly billing rate multiplied by the number of hours worked on a case.

7. The information contained herein is of my own personal knowledge, except as otherwise specified herein, and if called as a witness in this matter I would be competent to testify to all of the above.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

INTRODUCTION

On or about January 8, 1981, Fee-Petitioners in the above entitled matter submitted three additional documents in support of their motion for attorneys fees:

1. Affidavit of Robert L. Winslow in Support of Plaintiffs Motion for Reasonable Attorneys Fees and Costs;
2. Supplemental Affidavit of Gerald P. Lopez in support of Plaintiffs Motion for Reasonable Attorneys Fees and Costs; and

3. Opposition to Defendants Motion for Reasonable Attorneys Fees and Costs.

What follows is Defendants' brief response to the above documents.

1.

THE AFFIDAVIT OF ROBERT L. WINSLOW IS OBJECTED TO ON THE GROUNDS THAT IT IS IRRELEVANT, AFFIANT LACKS PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE, AND IT IS REPLETE WITH HEARSAY.

Under Rule 401 of the Federal Rules of Evidence "relevent evidence" means evidence having any tendency to make the existence of any fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action more probable or less probable than it would be without the evidence. Evidence which is not relevant is not admissable (F.R.E. 402). Although Mr. Winslow outlines a range of attorney rates, nowhere in Mr. Winslow's Affidavit does he state the amount that these particular attorneys charge. Courts have construed Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., 488 F.2d 714, 717-719 (5th Cir. 1974) to require "what is needed is the customary fee charged by these particular lawyers." Preston v. Mandeville, 451 F. Supp. 617 (S.D. Ala. 1978). Mr. Winslow's Affidavit is therefore irrelevant on the issue of reasonable attorneys fees in this particular case.

Rule 602 of the Federal Rules of Evidence requires that a witness may not testify to a matter unless evidence is introduced sufficient to support a finding that he has personal knowledge of the matter. Paragraphs four and five of Mr. Winslow's Affidavit (the only paragraphs of his affidavit which refer to Messrs. Lopez and Cazares with particularity), consist of Mr. Winslow's opinion based upon what he has been told. Nowhere in Mr. Winslow's affidavit does he assert that he has actually observed Messrs. Lopez or Cazares in the courtroom. Nowhere in his affidavit does he state that he has read any work product produced by Messrs. Lopez or Cazares. In short, Mr. Winslow, apparently, has had no opportunity to observe and perceive the facts which he sets forth by his own senses. Mr. Winslow simply lacks personal knowledge which is required for the proper admission of an affidavit as evidence in an action.

As this Honorable Court would be quick to recognize, the number of years that an attorney has practiced, and the law school from which he has graduated, taken alone, are not determinative of the proper reasonable hour billing rate for that person. In this case it is for this Honorable Court, not Robert L. Winslow, to determine the proper and reasonable billing rate for the attorneys involved. There is little doubt that this Honorable Court is qualified to determine intelligently and to the best possible degree this particular issue without enlightenment from Mr. Winslow.

Paragraphs four and five of Mr. Winslow's affidavit (the only paragraphs in his affidavit which refer directly to Mr. Cazares and Mr. Lopez) contain nothing but hearsay. These paragraphs set forth the education, the number of years in practice, the specialization, and the activities of Messrs. Cazare and Lopez, offered in evidence to prove the truth of the matter asserted, based upon facts of which Mr. Winslow has apparently been informed, but has no personal knowledge. Neither of these paragraphs should be admitted by this Court.

MR. LOPEZ' HOURS MUST BE REDUCED BECAUSE OF HIS FAILURE TO KEEP CONTEMPORANEOUS TIME RECORDS.

Mr. Lopez submitted a lengthy supplemental affidavit purportedly setting forth the number of hours expended on this case.

Mr. Lopez, however, has failed to state that the time list he submitted was kept contemporaneously. Based upon the character of many of the entries on Mr. Lopez' list, i.e. "Read second separate (45 page) motion to dismiss filed by various individual defendants." (page 9, lines 9-10); "Work on motion to require further answers and to compel production of documents: deliberately ignored discovery stated and asserted such objections as 'hearsay' and 'inadmissibility' of evidence; objected to terminology as 'unintelligible' when the term 'neighborhood problem' was employed by defendants not plaintiffs; deliberately avoiding sub-parts to questions; asserting attorney-client privilege without even attempting to demonstrate that privilege exists and applies: refuse production of documents through blanket assertions of irrelevance of work product rule" (Page 12, lines 7-13); "Preparation for argument re Plaintiffs' motion re taxing of costs—granted; further work on discovery" (Page 17, lines 14-15).

Each of the above entries indicates that the entry was not made contemporaneously with the event. This is particularly true of the last example noted wherein Mr.

Lopez indicates that the Plaintiffs' motions re taxing of costs was granted as the date of 3/6/78 when he was making his preparation for argument. The other entries are simply editorial comments unlikely to have been made at the time the work was allegedly being done. Why would an attorney indicate how many pages a motion has on a time sheet, or how many interrogatories he received? Such comments are clearly designed for the benefit of this Honorable Court in the instant motion for attorneys fees. Heigler v. Gatter, 463 F.Supp. 802 (E.D. Pa. 1978) directs that any figure that Mr. Lopez has reconstructed is suspect and must be reduced approximately 20% because of his failure to keep contemporaneous time records.

BECAUSE PLAINTIFFS' CLAIMS AGAINST DEFENDANTS WERE FRIVOLOUS, UNREASONABLE OR WITHOUT FOUNDATION, DEFENDANTS ARE ENTITLED TO AN AWARD OF ATTORNEYS FEES UNDER THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT.

Plaintiffs' opposition to Defendants' motion for reasonable attorneys fees and costs re: the granting of 18 Summary Judgments, misses the focal point of Defendants' contention: Plaintiffs simply neglected to engage in any discovery or investigation which would have enabled them to determine the proper defendants in such a lawsuit. As the affidavits of Gerald P. Lopez and Roy B. Cazares clearly point out, Mr. Lopez and Mr. Cazares began working on this case on August 21, 1975. The Complaint was filed by them on June 6, 1976. Nearly a year passed from that time that the attorneys first met with their clients and when the Complaint was eventually filed. At no time during that year—although Mr. Lopez has over 60 entries on his list of hours expended, and Mr. Cazares has over 20 entries on his list—was there any attempt to discover the names of the individual defendants who should be sued. Even though on January 14, 1976, Mr. Mr. (sic) Lopez made the following entry: "Research rationale and justification for John Doe practice in Ninth Circuit; alternatives in identifying unknown police officers," there seems to have been no attempt made to identify the unknown police officers, nor was there any attempt made to determine whether those police officers sued were even at the scene or on duty at the time.

It is our contention that without any investigation on the part of Plaintiffs, Plaintiffs' claims against these particular Defendants were frivolous, unreasonable or without foundation. The Summary Judgments granted herein—holding that there was no triable issue of fact involved as to these defendants—bears this out.

27. In favor of the plaintiff ENRIQUE FLORES and against defendant MICHAEL S. WATTS, for a violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $50.00, and punitive damages in the amount of $200.00;

28. In favor of the plaintiff ENRIQUE FLORES and against the defendant CITY OF RIVERSIDE, for a violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $1,500.00;

29. In favor of the plaintiff ENRIQUE FLORES and against the defendant CITY OF RIVERSIDE, for negligence, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $500.00;

30. In favor of the plaintiff ENRIQUE FLORES and against the defendant MICHAEL S. WATTS, for negligence, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $50.00;

31. In favor of plaintiff ENRIQUE FLORES and against the defendant LINFORD L. RICHARDSON, for negligence, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $50.00;

32. In favor of the plaintiff MANUEL FLORES, JR., and against the defendant GERALD MILLER, for a violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $500.00;

33. In favor of the plaintiff MANUEL FLORES, JR., and against the defendant ROBERT L. PLAIT, for a violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $1,000.00 and punitive damages in the amount of $2,000.00;

34. In favor of the plaintiff MANUEL FLORES, JR., and against the defendant CITY OF RIVERSIDE, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $2,000.00;

35. In favor of the plaintiff MANUEL FLORES, JR., and against the defendant GERALD MILLER for negligence, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $500.00;

36. In favor of the plaintiff MANUEL FLORES, JR., and against the defendant ROBERT PLAIT, for negligence, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $1,000.00;

37. In favor of the plaintiff MANUEL FLORES, JR., and against the defendant CITY OF RIVERSIDE, for negligence, actual or compensatory damages in the amount of $1,500.00.

FURTHER, on January 19, 1981, plaintiffs' and defendants' motions for reasonable attorneys' fees and costs came on regularly for hearing before the Honorable Mariana R. Pfaelzer, United States District Judge. Plaintiffs appeared by and through their counsel of record Gerald P. Lopez and Roy B. Cazares. Defendants appeared by and through their counsel of record, Jonathan Kotler and Patricia Kotler. The Court, having examined and considered the papers filed by the parties, having heard the argument of counsel, and having caused to be made and filed herein its written Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that plaintiffs' motion for reasonable attorneys' fees and costs is hereby granted pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Defendants are ordered to pay plaintiffs' reasonable attorneys' fees in the amount of $245,456.25.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that defendants' motion for attorneys' fees and costs is denied.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Plaintiffs' motion for the award of reasonable attorneys' fees and costs came on for hearing on January 19, 1981 before the Honorable Mariana R. Pfaelzer, United States District Judge. The Court, having heard and considered oral argument and having examined and considered the memoranda, affidavits and exhibits filed by the parties, makes the following Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law:

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Plaintiffs' action presented complex issues of law in a case involving eight individual plaintiffs, eleven individual defendants and a municipal defendant.

2. Counsel demonstrated skill and experience in handling this protracted civil rights case.

3. Given the nature of this lawsuit, many attorneys within the community would have been reluctant to institute this action.

4. The Court finds the following claimed number of hours to be fair and reasonable:

Attorney Services

Roy B. Cazares	681.25 hours
Gerald P. Lopez	1,265.50 hours
TOTAL	1,946.75 hours

Law Clerk Services 84.50 hours

5. The amount of time expended by counsel in conducting this litigation is reasonable and reflects sound legal judgment under the circumstances of this case.

6. Counsel for plaintiffs base their claimed award of attorneys' fees on an hourly rate of $125 per hour. This rate of compensation is typical of the hourly rate earned by attorneys of like experience within this judicial district.

7. The rate of $25 per hour, which counsel seek as compensation for the time expended by two law clerks, is a reasonable and customary hourly fee.

8. Plaintiffs have incurred reasonable attorneys' fees in the amount of $243,343.75 plus $2,112.50 in fees expended for law clerks. The amount of the total award is $245,456.25.

9. To the extent that any of the Conclusions of Law set forth below are deemed to be Findings of Fact, they are incorporated herein.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

From the foregoing Findings of Fact, the Court makes the following Conclusions of Law:

1. To the extent that any of the foregoing Findings of Fact are deemed to be Conclusions of Law, they are incorporated herein.

2. Plaintiffs maintained this civil action in order to secure the vindication of important constitutional rights. A fee award in the instant civil rights action will therefore advance the public interest.

3. No special circumstances exist which would render an award of attorneys' fees unjust.

4. Reasonable charges for services of law clerks may be properly included as part of an attorneys' fee award. Pacific Coast Agricultural Export Association v. Sunkist Growers, Inc., 526 F.2d 1196, 1210 (9th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 959 (1976); Keith v. Volpe, 86 F.R.D. 565, 576 (C.D. Cal. 1980).

5. Plaintiffs seek reimbursement for certain expenditures made by them during the prosecution of this case. As 42 U.S.C. § 1988 does not provide for the reimbursement of such expenses, the Court declines to order their reimbursement.

6. Plaintiffs, as the prevailing party, are entitled to an award of attorneys' fees in the amount of $245,456.25 as part of the costs pursuant to the Civil Rights Attorney's Fee of 1976, 42 U.S.C. § 1988.

7. This award is rendered against defendants in their official capacities.

No. 81-5362

Filed: June 15, 1982

PHILLIP B. WINBERRY
Clerk, U. S. Court of Appeals

OPINION

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Central District of California The Honorable Marianna R. Pfaelzer, Presiding

Argued and Submitted—March 2, 1982

Before: HUG, TANG, and PREGERSON, Circuit Judges.

PREGERSON, Circuit Judge:

42 U.S.C. § 1988 provides: "In any action or proceeding to enforce a provision of sections 1981, 1982, 1983, 1985, and 1986 of this title . . . the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs."

This appeal presents the question whether the amount of attorney's fees the district court awarded was reasonable under section 1988 where that amount greatly exceeded the verdict, and where the prevailing party was successful on fewer than all claims against fewer than all defendants.

Plaintiffs/appellees are Mexican-Americans who sought to vindicate their civil rights in a politically unpopular suit against the City of Riverside, the Riverside police chief, and thirty Riverside police officers.

The events out of which this lawsuit arose took place in August 1975, when appellees attended a party at a private residence in Riverside, California. The police, without a warrant, but with tear-gas and unnecessary physical force, broke up the party and arrested four of the appellees. The charges were dismissed for lack of probable cause.

Appellees sued the thirty-two defendants, alleging civil rights and pendent state tort violations.[1] The court granted summary judgment in favor of eighteen individual defendants and dismissed the claims against them.[2] After four years of discovery and two settlement conferences, a nine day trial ensued. The jury found in favor of all eight plaintiffs and against the City of Riverside and four of the individual officers on the negligence, false arrest, false imprisonment, and section 1983 claims. The jury awarded appellees total damages of $33,350.

After the trial, appellees moved for reasonable attorney's fees and costs pursuant to section 1988. The district court granted the motion and awarded $243,343.75 in attorney's fees (computed at $125 per hour, the standard rate for attorneys with comparable expertise in the civil rights area) and $2,112.50 in law clerk's fees (computed at $25 per hour).[3]

Appellants do not appeal the adverse jury verdict or the court's determination that appellees are entitled to an attorney's fees award. Appellants do, however, contend that the fee award is excessive.

DISCUSSION

In 1976, Congress enacted 42 U.S.C. § 1988 and thereby firmly established that successful civil rights plaintiffs may receive reasonable attorney's fees as part of the costs. The amount of reasonable attorney's fees is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Kerr v. Screen Extras Guild, Inc., 526 F.2d 67, 69 (9th Cir. 1975), cert. denied sub nom. Perkins v. Screen Extras Giuld, Inc., 425 U.S. 951 (1976). The trial court's determination of a reasonable attorney's fee will not be disturbed absent clear abuse of discretion. Id. See also Twentieth Century Fox Corp. v. Goldwyn, 328 F.2d 190, 221 (9th Cir.) cert. denied, 379 U.S. 880 (1964).

In Kerr, this court listed twelve factors for the district court to consider in setting attorney's fees awards.[4] The record must "demonstrate that the district court considered the factors established by Kerr." Kessler v. Associates Financial Services Company of Hawaii, Inc., 639 F.2d 498, 500 (9th Cir. 1981). The district court, however, need not discuss specifically each of the twelve factors. It is sufficient if the record shows that the court considered the factors "called into question by the case at hand and necessary to support the reasonableness of the fee award." Id. at 500 n.1. (citing Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 64 F.R.D.

680, 682 (N.D. Cal. 1974), aff'd, 550 F.2d 464 (9th Cir.), rev'd on other grounds, 436 U.S. 547 (1978)). See also Manhart v. City of Los Angeles, 652 F.2d 904, 907 (9th Cir. 1981).

The record here indicates that the court considered, applied, and discussed the Kerr factors necessary to support the award.[5] Having reviewed the record, we are satisfied that the district court did not abuse its discretion in awarding the attorney's fees requested.

Appellants urge this court to reduce the amount awarded because appellees "succeeded" on fewer than all of the original claims against fewer than all of the original thirty-two defendants, Sethy v. Alameda County Water District, 602 F.2d 894 (9th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1046 (1980), and because the attorney's fees were disproportionately larger than the jury verdict. Schaeffer v. San Diego Yellow Cabs, Inc., 462 F.2d 1002 (9th Cir. 1972).

In Manhart, we construed Sethy and concluded that no attorney's fees "may be paid for the time spent to prepare unrelated claims on which plaintiffs did not prevail." 652 F.2d at 909, citing Sethy, 602 F.2d at 898 (emphasis added). We distinguished Sethy by pointing out that "plaintiffs [in Manhart] pursued several claims to remedy the same injury, gender discrimination." 652 F.2d at 909. In Manhart, we concluded that if all claims are related to the same injury, then the amount of attorney's fees should not be reduced for time spent on unsuccessful claims if plaintiff prevails in the ultimate goal of the lawsuit.

Like Manhart, the present case involves related claims brought to remedy the same injury—here, the violation of civil rights. The district court, therefore, properly awarded attorney's fees for hours expended on unsuccessful but related claims. See also Seattle School District No. 1 v. Washington, 633 F.2d 1338, 1349-50 (9th Cir. 1980); Northcross v. Board of Education of the Memphis City Schools, 611 F.2d 624, 636 (6th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 911 (1980). This result is in line with Congress' unequivocal viewpoint that civil rights attorneys should be compensated "as is traditional with attorneys compensated by a fee-paying client for all time reasonable expended on a matter." S. Rep. No. 94-1011, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 6 (1976). Traditional methods of attorney compensation based on fee-paying clients do not differentiate between successful and unsuccessful claims. See, Northcross, 611 F.2d 636.

In passing section 1988, Congress intended to provide access to the judicial system for those who wish to vindicate civil rights violations. Reducing attorney's fees awards for unsuccessful related claims brought in good faith would militate against that policy and "would hardly further our mandate to use the 'broadest and most flexible remedies available' to us to enforce the civil rights laws if we were so directly to discourage innovative and vigorous lawyering in a changing area of the law."[6] Northcross, 611 F.2d at 636.

This decision is not affected by Bartholomew v. Watson, No. 80-3237, (9th Cir. Jan. 11, 1982), which does not refer to our earlier Manhart decision. Bartholomew was remanded because the record failed to reflect the standard the district court employed in granting the entire amount of attorney's fees requested by the prevailing party. In the present case, the record reflects that the district court applied the correct standard.

Appellants rely on Schaeffer v. San Diego Yellow Cabs, Inc., 462 F.2d 1002 (9th Cir. 1972), to support their contention that the amount of attorney's fees awarded must be proportionate to the jury verdict. In Schaeffer, a Title VII case, the district court declared invalid certain state laws relating to employee working conditions, refused damages for back pay, and awarded the prevailing party $600 in attorney's fees. The Ninth Circuit reversed in part, holding that certain issues were moot and that the plaintiff should receive some of the back pay that was denied. We remanded and suggested that the amount of attorney's fees "should be proportionate to the extent to which the plaintiff prevail[ed] in the suit." Id. at 1008 (emphasis added).

Schaeffer does not, as appellants suggest, prohibit an attorney's fees award disproportionate to a jury verdict. The extent to which a plaintiff has "prevailed" is not necessarily reflected in the amount of the jury verdict. Rather, the legislative history behind section 1988 demonstrates Congress' position that courts should award reasonable attorney's fees even if the rights vindicated are "nonpecuniary in nature. . . ." S. Rep. 94-1011, 94th Cong. 2d Sess. 6 (1976). Schaeffer does not limit the amount of attorney's fees a prevailing party may recover. That decision rests within the discretion of the district court.

We conclude that the district court did not abuse its discretion in awarding the attorney's fees requested by the plaintiffs/appellees.

AFFIRMED.

1. The complaint alleged violations of plaintiffs' civil rights protected by the First, Fourth, and Fourteenth Amendments, and 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1983, 1985(3), and 1986. In connection with said civil rights violations, plaintiffs also alleged related state law claims predicated on conspiracy, infliction of emotional distress, assault and battery, propert damage, breaking and entering, malicious prosecution, defamation, false arrest, false imprisonment, lost wages, negligence, and sought damages and declaratory and injunctive relief.

2. The reason why plaintiffs initially sued thirty Riverside police officers was because plaintiffs had great difficulty learning the identity of the officers actually involved in the incident that gave rise to the action.

3. The court reduced the original request by the amount of costs not contemplated under section 1988 (out-of-pocket office expenses) and did not apply the multiplier requested by appellees.

4. The following twelve factors were established first in Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., 488 F.2d 714, 719 (5th Cir. 1974) and adopted by the Ninth Circuit in Kerr:

    1. The time and labor required;
    2. The novelty and difficulty of the questions;
    3. The skill requisite to perform the legal services properly;
    4. The preclusion of other employment due to acceptance of the case;
    5. The customary fee;
    6. The contingent or fixed nature of the fee;
    7. The limitations imposed by the client or the case;
    8. The amount involved and the results obtained;
    9. The experience, reputation, and ability of the attorneys;
    10. The undesirability of the case;
    11. The nature of the professional relationship with the client;
    12. Awards in similar cases.

5. The district court carefully determined that:

   1. The action presented complex issues;

   2. The amount of time expended was reasonable and reflected sound legal judgment under the circumstances;

   3. The attorneys demonstrated skill and experience in handling this protracted civil rights case;

   4. The action was maintained to vindicate important constitutional rights and therefore advanced the public interest.

6. This is especially true in the present case. Appellees brought suit in 1975, years before the Supreme Court declared that municipalities could be sued under section 1983. Monell v. Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658 (1978).

Plaintiffs' motion for an award of attorney's fees and costs came on for hearing on October 24, 1983 and June 6, 1984 before the Honorable Mariana R. Pfaelzer, United States District Judge, on remand from the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit for further consideration in light of Hensley v. Eckerhart, — U.S. —, 103 S.Ct. 1933 (1983). Plaintiffs appeared at both hearings by and through their counsel, Patrick O. Patterson. Defendants appeared at both hearings by and through their counsel, Jonathan Kotler. The Court, having considered plaintiffs' memorandum regarding the hearing on filing and spreading the judgment of the Court of Appeals, having heard oral argument, having reconsidered the memoranda, affidavits, and exhibits previously filed by the parties, as well as the record as a whole, and having made and filed its written Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that plaintiffs' motion for reasonable attorney's fees and costs is hereby granted pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Defendants are ordered to pay plaintiffs' reasonable attorney's fees in the amount of $245,456.25.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that defendants' motion for attorney's fees and costs is denied.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Plaintiffs motion for an award of attorney's fees and costs came on for hearing on October 24, 1983 and June 6, 1984 before the Honorable Mariana R. Pfaelzer, United States District Judge, on remand from the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit for further consideration in light of Hensley v. Eckerhart, — U.S. —, 103 S.Ct. 1933 (1983). The Court, having examined and considered plaintiffs' memorandum regarding the hearing on filing and spreading the judgment of the Court of Appeals, having heard and considered oral argument, and having reconsidered the memoranda, affidavits, and exhibits previously filed by the parties, as well as the record as a whole, makes the following Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Plaintiffs' action presented complex and interrelated issues of fact and law in a civil rights case involving eight individual Chicano plaintiffs, a number of individual police officer defendants, and one municipal defendant, the City of Riverside.

2. The events upon which this action is predicated took place in the evening on August 1, 1975 when plaintiffs attended a party at a private residence located in Riverside. A large number of unidentified Riverside police officers, acting without a warrant but with tear gas and unnecessary physical force, broke up the party and arrested many of the people attending, including four of the plaintiffs. The party was not creating a disturbance in the community at the time of the break-in. The plaintiffs who were arrested were prosecuted, but the charges were dismissed for lack of probable cause.

3. A number of police officers were involved in the events referred to in Finding number 2 and at the trial the testimony of the parties and the witnesses was often in conflict as to the role of the individual officers in the events of the evening.

4. Under the circumstances of this case, it was reasonable for plaintiffs initially to name thirty-one individual defendants (thirty police officers and the chief of police) as well as the City of Riverside as defendants in this action. After further investigation and discovery, the Court granted summary judgment in favor of eighteen of the individual defendants and dismissed the claims against them.

5. After four years of discovery and two settlement conferences, both of which were ordered by and took place in the presence of this Court, a nine-day jury trial ensued. The jury, following seven days of deliberation, found in favor of all eight plaintiffs and against the City of Riverside and four of the individual officers on the § 1983, false arrest, false imprisonment and negligence claims. The jury awarded total damages of $33,350. In the opinion of the Court, the size of the jury award resulted from (a) the general reluctance of jurors to make large awards against police officers, and (b) the dignified restraint which the plaintiffs exercised in describing their injuries to the jury. For example, although some of the actions of the police would clearly have been insulting and humiliating to even the most insensitive person and were, in the opinion of the Court, intentionally so, plaintiffs did not attempt to play up this aspect of the case.

6. Plaintiffs were the prevailing parties in this action. The central and most important issue in this case was whether there was police misconduct committed by and condoned by defendants. Plaintiffs established this misconduct to the satisfaction of the jury and the Court. With respect to this central issue, plaintiffs were clearly the prevailing parties.

7. All claims made by plaintiffs were based on a common core of facts. The claims on which plaintiffs did not prevail were closely related to the claims on which they did prevail. The time devoted to claims on which plaintiffs did not prevail cannot reasonably be separated from time devoted to claims on which plaintiffs did prevail.

8. Counsel demonstrated outstanding skill and experience in handling this case.

9. Given the nature of this lawsuit and the type of defense presented, many attorneys in the community would have been reluctant to institute and to continue to prosecute this action.

10. The Court finds the following claimed number of hours to be fair and reasonable:

Attorney Services:

Roy B. Cazares	681.25 hours
Gerald P. Lopez	1,265.50 hours
TOTAL	1,946.75 hours
Law Clerk Services:	84.50 hours

11. Counsel for plaintiffs achieved excellent results for their clients, and their accomplishment in this case was outstanding. The amount of time expended by counsel in conducting this litigation was reasonable and reflected sound legal judgment under the circumstances.

12. Counsel for plaintiffs also served the public interest by vindicating important constitutional rights. Defendants had engaged in lawless, unconstitutional conduct, and the litigation of plaintiffs' case was necessary to remedy defendants' misconduct. Indeed, the Court was shocked at some of the acts of the police officers in this case and was convinced from the testimony that these acts were motivated by a general hostility to the Chicano community in the area where the incident occurred. The amount of time expended by plaintiffs' counsel in conducting this litigation was clearly reasonable and necessary to serve the public interest as well as the interests of plaintiffs in the vindication of their constitutional rights.

13. Counsel for plaintiffs base their claimed award of attorney's fees on a rate of $125.00 per hour. The Court finds this hourly rate typical of the prevailing market rate for similar services by lawyers of comparable skill, experience and reputation within the Central District at the time these services were performed.

14. The rate of $25.00 per hour, which counsel seeks as compensation for the time expended by two law clerks, was lower than the customary hourly rate for such services at the time those services were performed.

15. Plaintiffs achieved a level of success in this case that makes the total number of hours expended by counsel a proper basis for making the fee award.

16. Plaintiffs are entitled to attorney's fees in the amount of $243,343.75 plus $2,112.50 in fees expended for law clerks. The amount of the total award is $245,456.25, exclusive of interest.

17. To the extent that any of the Conclusions of Law are deemed to be Findings of Fact, they are incorporated herein.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. To the extent that any Findings of Fact are deemed to be Conclusions of Law, they are incorporated herein.

2. Plaintiffs are the prevailing parties in this action.

3. Plaintiffs maintained this action in order to secure the vindication of important constitutional rights. A fee award in this civil rights action will therefore advance the public interest.

4. No special circumstances exist which would render an award of attorney's fees unjust.

5. Reasonable charges for services of law clerks may be properly included as part of an award of attorney's fees. Pacific Coast Agricultural Export Association v. Sunkist Growers, Inc., 526 F.2d 1196, 1210 n.19 (9th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 959 (1976); Keith v. Volpe, 86 F.R.D. 565, 576 (C.D. Cal. 1980).

6. Plaintiffs seek reimbursement for certain expenditures made by them during the prosecution of this case. As 42 U.S.C. § 1988 does not provide for the reimbursement of such expenses, the Court declines to order their reimbursement.

7. Plaintiffs achieved a level of success in this case that makes the total number of hours expended by counsel a proper basis for the fee award. The amount of the fee awarded is justified in light of the substantial success achieved by plaintiffs. Hensley v. Eckerhart, — U.S. —, 103 S.Ct. 1933, 1940-43 (1983); Rutherford v. Pitchess, 713 F.2d 1416, 1421-22 (9th Cir. 1983); White v. City of Richmond, 713 F.2d 458, 461-62 (9th Cir. 1983); Smiddy v. Varney, 574 F. Supp. 710, 713 (C.D. Cal. 1983).

8. Plaintiffs' counsel are entitled to be compensated at the prevailing market rates within the Central District for similar services by lawyers of comparable skill, experience and reputation at the time. Blum v. Stenson, — U.S. —, 104 S.Ct. 1541, 1547 & n.11 (1984); White v. City of Richmond, 713 F.2d at 460-61.

9. Plaintiffs are entitled to an award of attorney's fees in the amount of $245,456.25 pursuant to the Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976, 42 U.S.C. § 1988.

OPINION

An appeal from the United States District Court For The Central District of California The Hon. Mariana R. Pfaelzer, Judge Presiding

Submitted: March 8, 1985*

*The panel unanimously finds this case suitable for decision without oral argument. Fed. R. App. P. 34(a) and Ninth Circuit Rule 3(f).

Before: HUG, TANG, and PREGERSON.
Circuit Judges.

PREGERSON, Circuit Judge.

The City of Riverside appeals the district court's award of $243,343.75 in attorney's fees to plaintiffs under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 (1982). The court awarded fees to plaintiffs because they prevailed on their civil rights claims against defendants.

In the underlying suit, filed in 1976, plaintiffs alleged that Riverside city police officers had violated plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment rights. Following trial in 1980, the jury found for the plaintiffs, and the district court awarded them attorney's fees. We affirmed the district court in an opinion published at 679 F.2d 795 (9th Cir. 1982), but the Supreme Court vacated and remanded the matter for reconsideration in light of Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424 (1983). City of Riverside v. Rivera, 461 U.S. 952 (1983). On remand, the district court made comprehensive findings of fact and conclusions of law demonstrating that it had considered the applicable factors necessary to support the reasonableness of the fee award. These factors are enumerated in Kerr v. Screen Extras Guild, Inc., 526 F.2d 67 (9th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 951 (1976).[1] In July 1984, the district court awarded the plaintiffs' attorney's fees in the same amount as previously awarded.

We find that the district court correctly reconsidered the case in light of Hensley and that the fee award is reasonable. Because the district court did not abuse its discretion in reaching its decision, we affirm.

Reasonable attorney's fees in civil rights cases may be awarded to the prevailing party at the district court's discretion, 42 U.S.C. § 1988 (1982), and we will not disturb the award absent an abuse of discretion. Rutherford v. Pitchess, 713 F.2d 1416, 1420 (9th Cir. 1983) (citing Kerr, 526 F.2d at 69). The plaintiffs are clearly the prevailing parties here. They succeeded on the most significant issue of the litigation—they proved that their civil rights had been violated by law enforcement officers.

In Hensley, the Supreme Court held that "the extent of a plaintiff's success is a crucial factor in determining the proper amount of an award of attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988." 461 U.S. at 440. The amount awarded must be reasonably related to the results obtained. Id. To demonstrate adequately the relationship between outcome and award, the district court need not specifically discuss each of the twelve "Kerr factors." The court need only explain how the award is reasonably related to the outcome of the proceedings.[2] Id. at 437; Rutherford, 713 F.2d at 1420. The district court in the instant case considered the outcome of the proceedings and sufficiently explained how it took the outcome into account in fixing fees. See Hensley, 461 U.S. at 437.

Appellants argue that plaintiffs' counsel spent time on claims unrelated to the successful claims, and that unproductive hours should be excluded from the computation of attorney fees. See id. at 434. In the instant case, however, the district court concluded that plaintiffs' attorneys spent no time on claims unrelated to the successful claims. The record supports the district court's findings that all of the plaintiffs' claims involve a "common core of facts" and that the claims involve related legal theories. Hensley teaches that "[w]here a lawsuit consists of related claims, a plaintiff who has won substantial relief should not have his attorney's fee reduced simply because the district court did not adopt each contention raised." Id. at 440.

Moreover, "the district court should focus on the significance of the overall relief obtained . . . in relation to the hours reasonably expended on the litigation." Id. at 435. On remand, this relationship is precisely what the district court focused on. The court considered the degree of success in relation to the ultimate award of fees and found a reasonable relationship between the extent of that success and the amount of the award. Because the district court clearly and concisely explained the grounds for its decision, we conclude that it did not abuse its discretion in awarding fees.[3]

Appellants also contend that the amount of the attorney's fee award is excessive because the amount of damages awarded by the jury, viz., $33,350, is relatively small in comparison to the attorney's fee award. The legislative history of section 1988 demonstrates that its purpose is to ensure "effective access to the judicial process." Id. at 429 (quoting H. R. Rep. No. 1558, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 1 (1976)). The amount of fees awarded should "not be reduced because the rights involved may be non-pecuniary in nature." Id. at 430 n.4 (quoting S. Rep. No. 1011, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 6 (1976), reprinted in 1976 U.S. Code Cong. & Ad. News 5908, 5913). The legislative history therefore lends no support to the proposition that there need be a relationship between the amount of damages awarded to the prevailing party and the amount of attorney's fees awarded.

Appellants finally contend that the district court did not review the record to see if the award was justified. This contention is meritless. The district court stated at oral argument in October 1983 that should the appellants be correct in their assertion that the award was not supported by the record, the court would "probably need another hearing." The statement indicated that the court intended to review the record to be sure that its decision was properly supported. The court's extensive findings of fact and conclusions of law indicate that it thoroughly reviewed the record.

In short, the district court correctly applied the necessary criteria to justify the attorney's fees awarded and explained the reasons for the award clearly and concisely. As required by Hensley, the district court adequately discussed the extent of the plaintiffs' success and its relationship to the amount of the attorney's fees awarded. 461 U.S. at 437. The award is well within the discretion of the district court.

AFFIRMED.

FOOTNOTES

1. The twelve Kerr factors are:

   (1) The time and labor required;

   (2) The novelty and difficulty of the questions;

   (3) The skill requisite to perform the legal service properly;

   (4) The preclusion of employment by the attorney due to acceptance of the case;

   (5) The customary fee;

   (6) Whether the fee is fixed or contingent;

   (7) Time limitations imposed by the client or the circumstances;

   (8) The amount involved and the results obtained;

   (9) The experience, reputation, and ability of the attorneys;

   (10) The undesirability of the case;

   (11) The nature and length of the professional relationship with the client;

   (12) Awards in similar cases.

Kerr v. Screen Extras Guild, Inc., 526 F.2d 67, 70 (9th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 951 (1976). These guidelines were initially presented in Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., 488 F. 2d 714, 717-19 (5th Cir. 1974), and derive directly from the American Bar Association Code of Professional Responsibility, Disciplinary Rule 2-106.

2. The district court did, in fact, consider most of the Kerr factors specifically in its findings of facts and conclusions of law (i.e., factors 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 9, 10, and 11). The appellants concede that, under the law of the Ninth Circuit, the district court is not required to respond to each of the factors enumerated.

3. The district court on remand reduced the original request by the amount of costs not contemplated under section 1988 and did not apply the multiplier requested by the appellees. The court stated that perhaps a multiplier should have been applied in light of the exceptional job the prevailing attorneys did, but again failed to do so after considering the case as a whole. Use of a multiplier may be appropriate where "the results obtained . . . represent a significant achievement." White v. City of Richmond, 713 F. 2d 458, 461 (9th Cir. 1983). The court's decision not to apply the multiplier is another indication that the district court carefully balanced the appropriate factors in awarding attorneys fees.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Flores is going to make a copy of the verdicts for you, both of you, and I will hear anything that you have to say and I will listen to anything you want to say about any further application for relief that you want to make to the Court or any motions that you want to make of any kind.

MR. CAZARES: At this time, Your Honor? Well—

THE COURT: You don't have to make the motion now. I am asking you is there anything further that either of you want the Court to do?

MR. CAZARES: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Or any motion you want to make?

MR. CAZARES: On behalf of the plaintiffs and their counsel, we will be making a motion for attorney fees and perhaps a motion for additur.

MR. KOTLER: Your Honor, the only thing I'd like to request to the Court at this time is that if the Court is aware of our scheduling difficulties, to the extent that we have motions, and they are set far enough into November that we could prepare an adequate response to.

THE COURT: Well, you can agree with Mr. Cazares about how we are going to deal with the attorney's fees issue. (p. 4) The only thing I can tell you is I'm not going to set it in November. It has to be set in October.

MR. KOTLER: We're not going to be in the country.

THE COURT: You're about to leave, aren't you?

MR. KOTLER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Then we can set it as soon as—when are you coming back?

MR. KOTLER: We'll be back around the 1st of November.

THE COURT: Then we can set it a week after you get back.

MR. KOTLER: I had in mind—it would be on a Monday, would it?

THE COURT: No, it doesn't have to be. It can be any day you wish.

MR. KOTLER: I was going to suggest November 10, which is the first Monday.

THE COURT: Is that all right with you?

MR. CAZARES: Yes.

THE COURT: Now, the burden is on you, as you know. All you have to do is to submit to the Court what your hours are.

MR. CAZARES: Yes.

THE COURT: And what you did.

MR. CAZARES: Yes.

(p. 5) THE COURT: The only thing I advise you is that you know, as well as I do, in the Ninth Circuit you have to give me the hours, the day you worked, and what you did.

MR. CAZARES: Yes, ma'am.

THE COURT: And if there are other people who worked—for example, Mr. Lopez, Professor Lopez, or any other people who have worked on the case. But you've got to tell them that I cannot grant attorney's fees of any kind or costs unless I have somebody give me a detailed account of what was done.

MR. CAZARES: Yes.

THE COURT: Now, it's obvious that I do not have to have a very detailed account of the days you were in trial, because you were in trial all that length of time, and I can take notice of that. But the preparation for the trial and all the time that you spent in coming here with the Riveras, and so forth, I have to have dates and hours.

MR. CAZARES: We'll prepare a proper motion, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Did you come to—and you also have to be aware of another thing, and that is, since I wasn't the judge on the case originally, you will have to reach back to the period of time when it was in the hands of another judge.

MR. CAZARES: Yes.

(p. 6) THE COURT: Now, the only thing I tell you, Mr. Kotler, is that he is going to get substantial attorney's fees, because this is a lot of time we're talking about.

MR. KOTLER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: My disposition now, so that you would be aware of it, is that I would give Mr. Cazares the attorney's fees that cover everything that he did that's legitimate so that the burden of the attorney's fees does not fall on the parties.

MR. KOTLER: Is Your Honor aware that there are other judgments that were issued summarily by Judge Ferguson and still not final as of this time?

THE COURT: I understand that, but I will have to reach back in those files. You will have to give me a legal ground to do it, and then you'll have to give me the time, but if you give me the basis for the time—I'm doing this more for your benefit, Mr. Kotler, than I am anybody else's, because I want to let you know now how I feel about attorney's fees. It is wrong to ask counsel who worked that hard and then not compensate him if there's a legal ground to do it and he can show me. That's all.

MR. KOTLER: I'm not disagreeing.

THE COURT: And the final thing I say is that I have no quarrel with the quality of what he did. So if I have no quarrel with the quality and he gives me the hours, (p. 7) I will compensate him. And you'll have to tell me the rate.

MR. CAZARES: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. CAZARES: Thank you.

THE COURT: Now, is there anything else?

MR. KOTLER: Have we agreed on the 10th of November?

THE COURT: Well, you take the time.

MR. CAZARES: Yes. That's fine.

THE CLERK: 9:30.

THE COURT: All right. Now, when will you put the papers in and when will you answer? That you will have to agree to.

MR. KOTLER: I can have them served by messenger on Mr. Cazares.

THE COURT: It's up to you.

MR. KOTLER: I would think by the 5th.

THE COURT: Is that all right with you?

MR. CAZARES: That's fine, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. That's fine.

MR. CAZARES: I don't ask that he serve both counsel.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. CAZARES: Thank you very much, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you, Mr. Kotler. Thank you, Mr. Cazares.

(p. 8) MR. CAZARES: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Here are the verdicts. You can take them if you want to and discuss them with your clients if you'd like. Mr. Kotler's clients are not here. And then we'll both make a copy for you.

MR. CAZARES: I'll make sure the copies are made.

MR. KOTLER: Is that going to be done now?

THE COURT: It will be done now.

(Proceedings were concluded.)

THE CLERK: Item No. 2, Civil 76-1803, Santos Rivera versus City of Riverside. Counsel, please make your appearance.

MR. CAZARES: Good morning, Your Honor. Roy Cazares appearing on behalf of the plaintiffs.

MR. LOPEZ: And Gerald P. Lopez appearing on behalf of the plaintiffs, Your Honor.

MR. KOTLER: Jonathan and Patti Kotler for the defendants, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. I have been through all of these papers and I understand full well what the positions of the parties are here. I am going to give you an opportunity to say whatever you want to.

But I will tell you initially that my feeling is that there was an excellent job done by Mr. Lopez and Mr. Cazares, and that it was a difficult case and it did take a lot of time. That is nothing to take away from the presentation you made, Mr. Kotler. I also say that you did a good job.

My feeling is that there should be attorney's fees granted to you in the amount that you suggested. I have my doubts about whether there should be a multiplier. (p. 5) That is a lot of money for attorney's fees.

The only other thing I would say is that there is no doubt whatsoever but that the jury found liability here. it doesn't make any difference what the jury thought about the amount of damages.

The jury may very well have thought that the damages were not any greater than what they were because they were sympathetic to the police perhaps. Perhaps it was that you tried it in the straightforward way you did.

I mean, one of the things I liked about the trial was it seemed to me that there was no attempt to whip this up into a major confrontation between this family, the members of this family, and the police. The feelings were high enough while it was going on.

If there had been—if either counsel had misbehaved during the trial in the sense that you would have whipped up the feeling, it would have been a very bad thing for the future, for their future in the community and for the police.

But I read some of the comments that were made after the trial was over, and how you can say that you won when there were more than 30 jury verdicts finding you liable, I really don't know.

MR. CAZARES: That disturbed me.

THE COURT: Well, that is all right; it disturbed (p. 6) the Court also.

Now the Court was called by the press and we try not to talk about cases, especially cases like that, because everything that you say causes more consternation on either side. But there is no doubt about the fact that you prevailed in that case and, therefore, you get the attorney's fees.

Now the question is: How much attorney's fees do you get.

The first part of that is: What is the proper hourly rate. The proper hourly rate is $125 an hour, in my opinion. And you get the amount that it costs for the staff that you have mentioned in there.

Now that's my preliminary feeling. No one can dissuade me from one thing, and that is: That the plaintiffs prevailed.

You see, one of the problems was that you had some of your people take the stand and they look as if they were not—they look as if they have survived this ordeal. They didn't look—

They looked intelligent; they looked as if they could handle it emotionally. That may have caused the jury to say, "Well, you know, if we give them an award it shouldn't be so much that the police would be personally forced to pay the judgment."

(p. 7) But you prevailed and you get the attorney's fees, and you get them at $125 an hour.

You can say anything you like after that, but no one, no one can tell me that you did not win that case, because you did.

MR. CAZARES: Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. Now if you'd like to sit down. Now either side can start, say anything you want to.

MR. KOTLER: There are two motions before the Court, first.

THE COURT: Yes, there are. We can take them in either order. You have a motion and they have a motion.

I don't intend to give you any attorney's fees.

MR. KOTLER: That is on the summary judgments?

THE COURT: I don't think that that is appropriate.

MR. KOTLER: Might I inquire as to the Court's reasoning.

THE COURT: You just heard me. I mean, you got some summary judgments granted, there is no question about that. But that was a rather quick process that you went through and it seems to me, since I don't usually give summary judgment attorney's fees, I don't think it is appropriate in this case.

(p. 8) MR. KOTLER: I will speak to the other motion.

THE COURT: In fact, I have never given attorney's fees in a summary judgment. After a jury trial, that is different.

Yes.

MR. KOTLER: A couple of things I want to make sure the Court is aware of.

To the extent that there were comments made to the press, I think the Court will search forever to find any comments that I made to the press about this case.

THE COURT: Now, Mr. Kotler, if I thought you made the comments I would have said you made them. You didn't make them. But I am making clear here in open Court as opposed to on the telephone with the various members of the press who called me, and media people, that you cannot have that many verdicts for the plaintiffs and say that the defendants won. That is impossible; it can't be.

Now the fact is that you did a good job of defending the police department and under those circumstances the jury verdicts were not particularly high. That may also be because of the fact that it was not quite as clear how they reacted to the arrest and the circumstances of the arrest.

But in any event, I am not quarreling with the (p. 9) jury's verdict and their judgment. I am just saying that nobody can say that the plaintiffs did not prevail, because they did.

MR. KOTLER: I think it it clear that they prevailed as to those parties and claims that they prevailed on.

I think the record is also clear that while it is true that the plaintiffs did receive, as the Court pointed out a few minutes ago, some 30-plus jury verdicts, it is also true that the defendants received some 220-plus dismissals.

I think it is also clear that while six of the defendants of the 32 that were sued had judgments rendered against them, that 26 did not.

I think, your Honor, there is just a couple of things I'd like to mention.

THE COURT: Let me ask you something, Mr. Kotler.

Suppose, just suppose that you had been involved in that situation and you had been one of the people who was arrested and taken in. And consider all the circumstances that occurred. Would you have known what participation there was of each one of the officers?

MR. KOTLER: I think, your Honor, when almost a year passes between the time I was arrested and taken in

(p. 10) and the suit is filed, a year in which discovery could have been taken, and then people who are sued who weren't even on duty that night, weren't even there, weren't on duty, had nothing to do with it, I think I would know that.

THE COURT: How did they know? I mean, you have got a situation there where you have got teargas and people being herded out into the street. I don't think under those circumstances that the people who were in and around the house had much of an opportunity to take down the badge numbers of those officers.

MR. KOTLER: I think it is clear that the people who were arrested that night did not. I think it is equally clear that the attorneys who filed the lawsuit did.

THE COURT: Well, I think even up to the point of the trial—and I will just say this for the record—even up to and including the time the testimony was taken at the trial, what each one of those officers did wasn't even clear from what they said themselves.

MR. KOTLER: I think that is so, your Honor, but you have to remember that at that point, at the time of the trial, 18 police officers had been let out by Judge Ferguson in this case because it was found by him that they had absolutely nothing to do with what happened.

THE COURT: I don't see how, I really absolutely don't see how, aside from taking the deposition of 50 officers, (p. 11) in which event there would have been objection and all kinds of motions made, I don't see how they would have known who it was who did what. Under the circumstances, I don't see how.

MR. KOTLER: I think as a starting point, finding out who was on duty that night would have been real easy. This wasn't done.

THE COURT: Well, they were in and out of the lawsuit fairly rapidly based on the fact that they weren't there.

MR. KOTLER: Close to three years after the incident took place.

THE COURT: And what happened to them in the interim? They served on the police department and life went on as usual.

MR. KOTLER: I am sure the Court doesn't want me to argue.

THE COURT: No, no. There is really no point in pursuing it any further. You have got your position and I am telling you what I think about it.

MR. KOTLER: What I did want to speak to this morning, your Honor, is a few things in the motions filed by the plaintiffs.

I wasn't able to find one case reported anyplace by any District Court in the United States where injunctive (p. 12) relief was not granted to plaintiffs that awarded to successful litigants' attorneys in a civil rights case anything even approaching one-third of the amount of a jury verdict.

And those cases are few and far between, those that went that high. The key to large awards, it seems in the reported cases, civil rights cases, is always injunctive relief.

Initially, as the Court will recall, injunctive relief was sought in this case but plaintiffs didn't prevail on their claim for injunctive relief and none was awarded.

Apparently the division of labor employed by the plaintiffs' attorneys here was a novel one.

THE COURT: They could still ask for the injunctive relief. They just didn't press that. They haven't pressed it yet.

MR. KOTLER: They didn't prevail on it.

THE COURT: You mean from the jury?

MR. KOTLER: From the jury, yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, the jury has no right to give injunctive relief.

MR. KOTLER: They dropped the claim, as I recall.

THE COURT: Well, go on.

MR. KOTLER: I don't recall that was even tried.

(p. 13) But in any event, the division of labor employed by the plaintiffs here appears to be a novel one. When in doubt, they did things twice.

And now they are asking the Court to sanction that kind of double billing. I am taking these numbers, your Honor, directly from the affidavits filed by Mr. Lopez and Mr. Cazares.

First of all, they have 92.25 hours for work performed in action CV 78-2076. That is a totally different action. It is an action that is not before this Court. It is an action that was not tried.

It is a malicious prosecution action brought by one Richard Albee. They have asked for and apparently they are receiving the sum of $11,531.25 for work performed in another action.

There is 197 hours of conversations between Mr. Lopez and Mr. Cazares. Nothing more —

THE COURT: I haven't got any doubt that it probably took 250 hours of conversation about the case between the two of them.

MR. KOTLER: No, I just want to point this out, your Honor.

There are notes of Mr. Lopez's second affidavit which says, "Notes for Cazares," things that he was trying to educate Mr. Cazares on; 45½ hours, $6,000.

(p. 14) Mr. Lopez spent 59 hours preparing jury instructions that this Court largely threw out; $7,000.

THE COURT: No, I didn't. No, I didn't. I think those were good jury instructions. I tried to pare down the jury instructions so that they'd be fair on both sides. I may have pared them down so much that I could have caused the lower verdicts.

MR. KOTLER: There is 143 hours just on Mr. Lopez's time alone, your Honor, for preparing the pretrial order; $17,906.25 at $125 an hour.

I might add, the record is also clear in this case that the pretrial order — that there were some 20-odd pretrial conferences, almost without exception continued either because the Court wasn't prepared to hear it — not your Honor necessarily — or because Mr. Lopez or Mr. Cazares asked for a continuance. Each time it was prepared, Mr. Cazares came up here to Los Angeles. Mr. Lopez didn't appear except on rare occasions. This is time that they have billed on this method.

There was review of one set of further answers to interrogatories by Mr. Lopez; 23 hours.

There is time that Mr. Cazares put down in his time slips as "standby time." This is while Mr. Lopez was here in Los Angeles. Mr. Cazares asked for the sum of $5,687 while he was standing by in Los Angeles. Mr. (p. 15) Lopez could have been just as easily standing by.

Then there is the review of the same documents by these two individuals, documents that I sent to them, and they have asked the Court for 115 hours' time on review of documents. It is over $14,000.

What this really reminds me of, your Honor, if the Court will bear with me for a moment and then I will finish, is a story I heard recently about an attorney who died, and he went up to heaven.

He got up to the pearly gates and Saint Peter was there. He said, "I want to congratulate you. You are the first attorney that we have ever admitted to heaven."

And the attorney was very flattered. He said, "How come?" An Saint Peter said, "Because we were looking for somebody who had great years of experience in counseling and since you have been an attorney for 107 years, you fit the bill."

The attorney thought for a minute and said, "There must be some mistake. When I died, — I died yesterday of a heart attack — I was 43 years old."

And Saint Peter said, "There must be some mistake." He called his communique control officer. And he hung up the phone and he said, "No, you are 107 years old."

And the attorney said, "I don't understand how (p. 16) you got that."

Saint Peter said, "Simple: We got it from your time slips."

I think that is what is happening in this case. Thank you.

THE COURT: Well, that may be, but I don't feel that way about it.

Now what is the number of the other action?

MR. KOTLER: CV 78-2076, you Honor. It is called Albee, I think, versus Rivera.

THE COURT: Yes, yes. All right.

MR. LOPEZ: May I respond?

THE COURT: Yes, certainly.

MR. LOPEZ: Let me address myself to the question of whether we are entitled to fees on that. In the event this repeats anything the Court is already aware of, bear with me.

One summary judgment was granted to the individual police officers. They jointly filed suit against both our clients and Mr. Cazares and myself.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. LOPEZ: But rather than in this case as some form of cross-complaint as a malicious prosecution, in the State Court in the County of Riverside.

I immediately moved to remand the case to this (p. 17) court at that time with Judge Ferguson on the basis of this principle: That essentially the question that was before the State Court in Riverside was whether or not there was reason to believe that the claim that we brought was brought in good faith as a 1983 claim: "Was it a federal question."

Because Judge Ferguson agreed with my conclusion that, indeed, it was, he took jurisdiction over the case and dismissed it.

THE COURT: That is what is referred to in your papers.

MR. LOPEZ: And that is what defendants' counsel would have the Court not include as part of the primary action when, indeed, essentially all that was done in the State Court by Mr. Kotler on behalf of the 18 summarily adjudged defendants was to bring what essentially was a cross-complaint, something that we are clearly entitled to by all the law that exists on attorney's fees.

The question of injunctive relief actually was something I wasn't going to address before the Court and I can tell you quite simply why not. While it was clearly not a question brought to the jury, since the jury has nothing to do with granting equitable relief, —

THE COURT: Nothing, no.

MR. LOPEZ: — we thought hard and long about precisely what entitlements we had for any of our plaintiffs (p. 18) with respect to some kind of future equitable relief.

But the bottom line of what we would ask for is that the police officers obey the law. And that is virtually always denied by a court because a court properly, I think, says that for the future we will assume that all police officers will abide by the law, including the Constitution.

So that we brought nothing and have pursued nothing; indeed because we too agree with the Court that that will happen.

THE COURT: Now let me just say one thing for the record, and that is: That the plea was in there for injunctive relief. There wasn't any reason to pursue it, I suppose. But if you had asked for it against some of those officers I think I would have granted it.

MR. LOPEZ: I hope I can accept that as a proposition that says that in the event that anything happens in the future concerning those officers or our clients in the City of Riverside, that this Court will remain available for any appropriate equitable relief.

THE COURT: I would agree with you that there is a problem about telling the officers that they have to obey the law. But if you want to know what the Court thought about some of the behavior, it was — it would have warranted an injunction. There cannot be a piece of (p. 19) evidence more appalling than the piece of evidence about the officer singing from the helicopter. There can't be any behavior more reprehensible than that, in my opinion.

Now I will not comment on some of the rest of it because part of the rest of the behavior at the time that this occurred was due to the fact that they didn't know what they were doing and they had nobody to tell them what they should do. There was no direction and they just simply lost their heads, totally. That is my opinion from the evidence.

I will not go to castigate the officers, but in my opinion this was really a very sad day for that police department.

MR. LOPEZ: Thank you, your Honor. That is all I have.

THE COURT: I intend to give the attorney's fees.

MR. LOPEZ: Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. So the attorney's fees, not multiplied, are awarded, and the costs. You will prepare an order to that effect, please, and give it to the Court to sign.

MR. CAZARES: Yes, your Honor. Should we prepare the judgment as well, your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, yes. Now let me see. The (p. 20) order that you do must deny the defendants the attorney's fees and grant them to you. Then you prepare the judgment and submit it.

Now is there anything left over? There is nothing left, is there?

MR. LOPEZ: The only thing that is left, your Honor, is — might I explain?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. LOPEZ: The history of this case that was filed in the State Court in the County of Riverside is, I think, accurately described as "peculiar."

After it was dismissed by Judge Ferguson there was a disagreement between Mr. Kotler and Judge Ferguson, one that frankly we were on the outside of, as to whether or not it should be dismissed with or without prejudice.

In fairness to Mr. Kotler and the defendants, what Judge Ferguson intended was an order dismissing it with prejudice because he thought at that time that in order to comply with some federal version of a malicious prosecution claim there had to me a final order from which the defendants could move, and that a summary judgment in the context of a larger case was not a final order.

Mr. Kotler disagreed, claiming that if you dismiss it with prejudice, even with that meaning, that they shall — that is, the 18 summarily adjudged defendants — (p. 21) be forever foreclosed from bringing this claim again.

Mr. Kotler took it up on appeal, where he and Cazares argued before the Ninth Circuit. The Ninth Circuit essentially said, "What is it that you want?"

And Mr. Kotler said, "Simply not to be foreclosed in the future."

Both our papers and Mr. Cazares in oral argument said, "We understand that that is not the case and we don't mean to misconstrue what Judge Ferguson always had intended to do," in which case the order of the Ninth Circuit was handed down consistent with that.

What remains, however, is not only the possibility, but I suspect the likelihood, that both our clients and Mr. Cazares and myself will again be sued in the Riverside Court on the basis of this malicious prosecution that we had already once successfully removed. So that I strongly suspect that we will be before this Court again on a case intimately related to the case that was tried before this jury, and go forward on that.

And that is all that remains.

THE COURT: I suspose that, if that is the kind of judgment which is being exercised, that is the kind of judgment that is being exercised, and it will come to me.

MR. LOPEZ: Thank you, your Honor.

MR. KOTLER: Your Honor, rather than argue that (p. 22) point, I don't want anything that Mr. Lopez said to be deemed an acceptance by me of the truth of what he just said.

THE COURT: I understand that.

MR. KOTLER: Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes. I hope better judgment than that prevails. You know, there has to be an end to things at some point.

All right. You prepare those orders. I would hope that you could do that quite soon.

MR. CAZARES: Thank you, your Honor.

MR. LOPEZ: We will. Thank you, your Honor.

MR. KOTLER: Your Honor, how much time will I have to review the proposed judgment?

THE COURT: I would think that if you get it done this week and give it to him, you can look at it and put into the court next week whatever you have in mind and then I will sign it before the end of the month.

MR. LOPEZ: That is fine, your Honor. Thank you, your Honor.

MR. CAZARES: Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you.

(p. 4) LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA; MONDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1983; 10:00 A.M.

THE CLERK: Item No. 1 on the calendar, Civil 76-1803, Santos Rivera versus City of Riverside. Counsel, please make your appearance.

MR. KOTLER: Good morning, your Honor. Jonathan Kotler for the defendant, City of Riverside.

MR. PATTERSON: Patrick Patterson for the plaintiffs.

THE COURT: All right. We have notice that today we are filing and spreading the mandate. Now the question is: Would I change my mind about the attorney's fee award based on all of the factors that I must take into consideration.

Now, I have read the papers and so I think I'd rather hear from Mr. Kotler.

MR. PATTERSON: Fine, your Honor.

MR. KOTLER: Your Honor, it is my understanding under Hensley that certain findings have to be made. I don't think that there is sufficient documentation in the file to enable the Court to make those findings. That's been our position all along.

THE COURT: Which findings can't I make?

MR. KOTLER: Well, there hasn't been word one in the motions or in any of the declarations with respect to what their billing rate was. There hasn't been anything in the file with respect to what their expertise was. There's (p. 5) been no finding by the Court with respect to—

THE COURT: No, you are wrong about that. About their expertise?

MR. KOTLER: Other than their own declarations.

THE COURT: Who has to say anything about it?

MR. KOTLER: It seems to me that there is a declaration by an attorney in Century City, under penalty of perjury, that says that based on these two individuals' request, the request is justified both on their hourly rate and their expertise. He never says that he knows either of them. It seems to me that the only finding with respect to hourly rate is by this individual at Irell and Manella.

THE COURT: Now, you understand, Mr. Kotler, that the United States Supreme Court is not saying, in sending the matter back, and the Ninth Circuit is not saying, in sending the matter back, that the award is wrong or not supported. It merely wants the Court to give it some more findings. You are now technically telling me that there is no basis for deciding that those two lawyers were expert? I watched them. Would you quarrel with their expertise?

MR. KOTLER: Certainly, I would, just based on the results obtained, which is one of the things that Hensley talked about.

THE COURT: You mean because they only won— was it 37, 37 of their claims?

(p. 6) MR. KOTLER: No, your Honor. They only won on three of their claims, three of the theories of — well, I have that. They only won —

THE COURT: I know, I understand.

MR. KOTLER: Well, your Honor said 37 claims. In fact, they never pled 37 claims.

THE COURT: No, I am talking about in all — I have forgotten the exact number, but there were a lot of verdicts in there.

MR. KOTLER: There were a lot of verdicts and there were something like seven or eight times that many verdicts for the defendants. There also was a judgment of $33,350 on a case where the offer had been within $8,000 —

THE COURT: When had the offer been within $8,000?

MR. KOTLER: Prior to trial, to Mr. Cazares. I made it myself. It was a $25,000 offer. I noticed in Mr. Patterson's paper there was talk about a $10,000 offer, and there was years before —

THE COURT: You, in my presence, offered them $10,000.

MR. KOTLER: I did, your Honor.

THE COURT: And that is all you offered them.

MR. KOTLER: No, your Honor, that is not correct.

THE COURT: All right. Now, Mr. Patterson, let me hear from you.

(p. 7) MR. PATTERSON: Well, in our view, your Honor, the only question before the Court, in light of Hensley, is whether the Court has to enter a more specific finding as to the amount of the fee being justified by the level of success. We think there is adequate material in the record to support that finding and we'd ask the Court to enter that finding and enter the judgment for the amount of the attorney's fees.

THE COURT: Let me ask you this, Mr. Patterson: Do you think I have to make a finding on the 12 factors that are in Johnson v Georgia Highway Express?

MR. PATTERSON: No, your Honor. I think that the Ninth Circuit in White v City of Richmond, a very recent case that was cited in our papers, —

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. PATTERSON: — has indicated that that level of specificity is not required. The Supreme Court in Hensley as well indicated that a number of the Johnson factors were already implicated in the earlier parts of the test that the Court described in Hensley, so we don't think you have to make additional findings as to all those factors, but merely to specify why it is the Court believes that the amount of the fee is justified by the level of success that the plaintiffs obtained in the case.

THE COURT: Say it again. Why the plaintiffs are (p. 8) entitled to the attorney's fees based on the level of success?

MR. PATTERSON: That is apparently the finding that the Supreme Court has required the Court to make in the Hensley case.

THE COURT: Well, let me pursue this a little further with you. You think that the Court can't make an award of attorney's fees in the amount that the Court did make if the recovery is $33,000? Do you think I can't give anything more than the thirty-three?

MR. PATTERSON: No, certainly not, your Honor. I think that the Hensley case and the White v City of Richmond case both indicate that that is not the test that is supposed to be applied.

THE COURT: I didn't think so.

MR. PATTERSON: I think the Court's award clearly is justified by the circumstances in this case. All the Court is required to do under Hensley is to make more explicit its reasoning in finding that that amount of fees was justified by the circumstances of this case.

The Court did that to some extent in the findings it had already entered, which were similar to the District Court's findings in the Hensley case in the Supreme Court.

THE COURT: Very similar.

MR. PATTERSON: Very similar.

(p. 9) THE COURT: I didn't just make the award. I did say what I thought about the case.

MR. PATTERSON: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: And the way it was handled. I certainly though there was a basis for the award.

MR. PATTERSON: But the problem is the Supreme Court apparently wants a more explicit statement of the basis for the award where the plaintiffs have prevailed on fewer than all the claims that are asserted, which is the situation here. But the fact that the plaintiffs only obtained damages and not injunctive relief is not determinative, nor would it be determinative if it were vice versa. These rights are by their nature nonpecuniary.

The legislative history underlying the Section 1988 makes it clear that that is not the sole criterion; that it would discourage rather than encourage civil rights litigation to restrict fees in that way. That, I think, is not what the Supreme Court is trying to suggest in the Hensley case and, certainly, the Ninth Circuit did not suggest it in the White case.

THE COURT: Now let me go back to you, Mr. Kotler. Are you telling me that you don't think there is in the file any declaration indicating what their hourly rate was and the number of hours they spent?

MR. KOTLER: What their hourly rate was?

(p. 10) THE COURT: Yes.

MR. KOTLER: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: There is nothing in there?

MR. KOTLER: I don't recall that there was.

THE COURT: Well, Mr. Patterson, I will have to look back because I wouldn't have made an award of attorney's fees if I didn't have the number of hours and I didn't have the hourly rate, and the Ninth Circuit wouldn't have affirmed it. And you noticed they did.

MR. KOTLER: Your Honor, my memory is my memory. I recall that they asked for attorney's fees at the rate of $125 an hour and that is what the Court awarded. I also recall a declaration by each of them that they were fresh out of law school when the case started and I recall nothing about what they were charging at the time.

THE COURT: They were two of the best lawyers who have ever appeared in a civil rights case here in this courtroom, and they did an absolutely superb job. Everything that they submitted in writing was well done. The way Mr. Cazares handled that trial and the dignity with which those plaintiffs acquitted themselves I thought reflected admirably on him.

MR. KOTLER: Your Honor, the Court asked me if there was anything in the file with respect to what their hourly rate was and my recollection is there was not.

(p. 11) THE COURT: I am sure there must be because I would not have given that award if I had not found it there.

All right. I will look back on it. I tell you now that I will not change the award. I will simply go back and be more specific about it. If for any reason Mr. Kotler is correct, and I don't think he is, I will probably need another hearing with you.

MR. KOTLER: Will we receive notification by the clerk with respect to that additional hearing?

THE COURT: Yes, if I need it. I will look back and see what was said in the declarations. All right. Thank you.

MR. KOTLER: Thank you.

MR. PATTERSON: Thank you, your Honor.

I certify that the foregoing is a correct transcript from the record of proceedings in the above-entitled matter.
